Former Ambassador To Japan Is Cross-Examined On Earlier Statements

CODES ORDERED BURNED
Statements On Isolationist Views Read Into Record During Hearing

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—The congressional Pearl Harbor investigation began at 10:01 a. m. today with Joseph C. Grew, last ambassador to Japan, again on the witness stand.

Chairman Alben W. Barkley, D. Ky., announced that Gen. George C. Marshall, former chief of staff, will testify "just as soon as his schedule can be arranged" before he leaves for China as ambassador.

Before Sen. Owen Brewster, R. Me., resumed the cross-examination, Grew said he wanted to read a telegram which he received from Secretary of State Cordell Hull Nov. 23, 1941.

Hull, describing in detail the modus vivendi (temporary agreement) under consideration for a time, said it was "dropped" and "the fact that this government had a modus vivendi under consideration was not mentioned" to the Japanese ambassador.

Grew also referred to a question yesterday as to whether he was instructed to destroy codes at the embassy. He said he had found a telegram in state department files dated Dec. 5, 1941, sent to Peiping by naval radio. He did not think he had even received it.

The telegram gave instructions to follow in case communications were "severed", and said it was "of the most importance" that codes be burned.

Grew told Brewster that he was "inclined to feel" that agreement on a modus vivendi in late November probably would not have prevented the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Brewster wondered whether if there had been an agreement on a modus vivendi, Japan at the end of a three or six-month waiting period would have gone ahead with her aggression since German military success was to decline.

Grew said he doubted whether that "would have had much to do" with Japan's decision.

"They were pulling away from them," he said. "They didn't like the Germans. A great many resented being tied up with them in the Axis pact."

Brewster asked whether Grew believed that further Jap moves south would have made American intervention necessary or whether

Lindbergh Shot Down Jap Plane

Details Of Lone Eagle's Exploit Made Public For First Time

BY WILLIAM B. DICKINSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK, Nov. 29—Charles A. Lindbergh sent a Japanese Zero fighter plane down in flames with one short burst from the guns of his Army Lightning during a Far East air forces raid on oil installations at Balikpapan, Borneo, on October 10, 1944.

The high military authority from whom I first obtained this story more than 13 months ago has just released me from the pledge of secrecy I gave at that time, and I am now able to give full details.

Reason for secrecy—at least until the end of the Japanese war—was obvious: Lindbergh was a civilian, and as such was supposed to be a non-combatant. And after his one combat flight to Balikpapan, he was ordered by Gen. George C. Kenney, FEAF commander, to make no more fighting missions.

The story was given me by a high officer as I sailed aboard the regular Navy transport ship, the USS Macabue, bound for Leyte, the Philippines, on October 20, 1944.

Lindbergh, then 42 years old, had come to the southwest Pacific area some weeks before, as a civilian attached to the Army Air Forces, to train American fighter pilots, most of them little more than teenagers.

Wedemeyer Says He Had No Instructions To Deal With Communists

BULLETIN
CHUNGKING, Nov. 29—Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, U. S. commander in China, said today that Gen. George Marshall is coming to China to survey the military situation and make recommendations to President Truman on future military aid to China.

CHUNGKING, Nov. 29—Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, commander of U. S. forces in China, said today he had ignored Chinese Communist Gen. Chu Teh's formal protest against American intervention in the civil war because his instructions directed him to deal only with the Chinese central government.

He said that presence at Yanan of a U. S. liaison group, similar to one in Chungking did not constitute recognition of the Yanan Communist headquarters.

"That group existed at Yanan when I first came to China and it has not been removed because it has been very useful to me," he told a press conference. "It supplied intelligence on Japanese activities and located American fliers who were forced down."

Wedemeyer said the Communists had promised him that six American fliers, who had been arrested after being forced down west of Tientsin recently, would be returned soon.

Meanwhile, China's Nationalist and neutral newspapers welcomed the appointment of Gen. of the Army George C. Marshall as envoy to China. The Communist New China Daily News did not comment today.

The rightist World Daily News commented that "American career diplomats failed to understand the people's mind in China on one hand and the world's terrorist bloc on the other."

"Events in Europe, the Near East and Far East today prevent us from thinking the United States could possibly be complacent," the World said. "America could not evade involvement in the second world war. Americans, wake up and watch the third one!"

The influential Independent Ta Kung Po said Marshall's appointment "signified Washington's most serious attention to the Far East."

Death Toll On Highways Increasing

CHICAGO, Nov. 29—The National Safety Council, citing a rapidly increasing traffic death toll, warned today that this country "is paying an inflationary price in human life for the privilege of indulging in a postwar traffic spree."

Traffic accidents are "getting out of control," it said. The council reported that traffic deaths throughout the nation went up 53 per cent in October over the same month a year ago and said that the toll for the first 10 months of the year was 14 per cent higher than in 1944.

The October death toll of 3,440 compares with a total of 3,303 dead and missing in the attack on Pearl Harbor.

"The nation becomes properly alarmed over Pearl Harbor, inflation or almost anything else that results in excessive loss of life or money," Ned H. Dearborn, council president, said. "But it accepts with a shrug of the shoulder and an amazing complacency an accident toll that is a disgrace to a civilized country."

It is time, Dearborn said, for pedestrians to behave like "sensible adults," and for drivers "to quit using their war-worn cars as if they were on a kamikaze mission."

NAZIS PLANNED TWO-FRONT WAR BACK IN 1937

NUERNBERG, Nov. 29—Germany was preparing for a two-front war in Europe as far back as 1937 and thought Russia was poorly prepared to enter the conflict, a secret Nazi war ministry document disclosed today in the war crimes trial.

A directive issued on June 24, 1937, by the war minister, Field Marshal Werner von Blomberg, ordered the German army to be ready for a two-front war with main emphasis in the west, or a two-front war with main emphasis in the southeast.

In the second plan it included special instructions for "warlike complications with red Spain."

Blomberg's order put the Nazi army in a state of readiness "to make possible military exploitation if politically favorable opportunities should occur."

He wrote, "the general political situation justifies the supposition that Germany need not consider an attack from any side. Indications of this are, in addition to a lack of desire for war among almost all nations, particularly the western powers, the lack of preparedness for war of a number of states, and of Russia in particular."

American Prosecutor Sidney Alderman introduced the document to prove Nazi aggressive intentions toward Austria.

FULL PROBE DEMANDED

Republicans And Democrats Clamoring For Foreign Policy Investigation

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—Responding to angry demands from both Republicans and Democrats, congressional leaders today promised an investigation into ex-ambassador Patrick J. Hurley's blistering indictment of American career diplomats.

Chairman Tom Connally, D. Tex., of the senate foreign relations committee, said he planned tentatively to begin an inquiry Monday. He said he would call both Hurley and Secretary of State James F. Byrnes to get the full story behind Hurley's dramatic resignation as ambassador to China two days ago.

Connally's plans, however, did not silence congressional demands for a more sweeping investigation of all phases of American foreign policy and the way it is being carried out by the state department. Resolutions for such inquiries were introduced in both the house and senate.

Gen. George C. Marshall, who will succeed Hurley as envoy to China, prepared to leave for Chungking as soon as he testifies before the Pearl Harbor investigating committee. He is an important witness and, according to (Continued on Page Two)

ATOMIC BOMB WARNING GIVEN

Expert Paints Grim Picture Of World Ruled By Fear Before Congress

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—A leading atom-bomb expert told congress today that failure to control atomic weapons would lead to a world in which "every ripple on the international scene will make us wonder whether the atomic bombs may not arrive before morning."

Dr. Harold C. Urey, University of Chicago professor who played a major part in atom bomb work, painted the grim picture of a world ruled by fear in testimony before the special senate atomic energy committee.

Should international attempts to control the bomb fail, he said, "tensions" will mount "beyond anything we have ever seen or experienced."

"In a few years we will begin moving our families far from big cities and industrial plants if we can afford to do so," he said, and then will come the fear that at any moment atom bombs might fall, delivered by an unknown foe.

Steel Workers Favor Strike By 5-1 Margin; Vote Costs $300,000

Results of the most extensive vote in the history of organized labor today showed CIO steelworkers overwhelmingly in favor of strike action, if necessary, to back demands for a $2-a-day wage increase.

Workers who fashioned the steel and aluminum sinews of war gave their leaders a resounding five-to-one vote of confidence, the National Labor Relations Board reported on the basis of approximately 75 percent of the ballots cast.

The United Steel Workers (CIO), however, warned its members that the vote did not constitute authorization for a work stoppage; that the final strike decision rested with CIO and USW President Philip Murray and his strike strategy staff.

The trade journal Iron Age predicted a strike could be expected some time after the first of the year.

The latest figures from steel and aluminum plants, iron ore pits and bauxite mines across the nation gave: 812 plant bargaining units, yes 286,715; no 60,619.

The vote, conducted by the NLRB at an estimated cost of $300,000, covered approximately 650,000 steelworkers employed by a total of 766 companies in 27 states.

An additional 250,000 steelworkers have scheduled strike votes by Dec. 31, so that a work stoppage, if called, ultimately would affect some 900,000 union members.

As USW members voted whether to tie up steel production, nearly half a million workers were away from their jobs in strikes and shut-downs almost universal the result of demands for increased wages.

In the largest walkout, government labor officials continued efforts to bring together officials of the United Auto Workers (CIO) and the giant General Motors Corp.

UAW representatives met yesterday in Washington with labor department officials, but company executives remained cool to invitation to discuss the nine-day strike which has shut down 93 plants and idled 225,000 workers.

Following a four-hour conference with union leaders yesterday, Edgar L. Warren, conciliation service director, said he would do everything in his power to get General Motors back into bargaining conferences on union demands for a 30-per cent wage increase.

RUSSIA WANTS STATEMENTS ON MANDATE SETUP

LONDON, Nov. 29—Russia today indirectly called on the nations holding old League of Nations mandates to say now whether they intend to put them under the trusteeship system of the new United Nations organization.

A statement on the subject of mandates by the Soviet delegate, Andrei A. Gromyko, in committee debate at the UNO preparatory commission conference went unanswered by any of the six mandatory powers represented.

Truman Gives Statements On German Problem And Orders Seizure

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—President Truman by executive order today ordered the Office of Defense Transportation to seize and operate the Great Lakes Towing Co., Cleveland, O.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—President Truman announced today that this government has taken steps to revise the Potsdam declaration with a view to remedying difficulties in the four-power control of Germany.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—President Truman said today that reconversion of U. S. industry from war to peace production was well on its way toward completion.

In a news conference review of the first 100 days of reconversion, Mr. Truman said total employment was rising after the initial post-war layoffs and was now back at the level of V-J day. He added that employment is expected to continue to rise.

Mr. Truman said the disruption of our economy by the return of peace was much less severe than had been anticipated and reiterated that reconversion was almost completed.

The President said frankly that he made his reconversion recapitulation at this time to show that the administration is not asleep on the job and that, actually, the reconversion program is far ahead of schedule.

He warned that inflationary pressures are still great, and he saw "danger signals" building up through the Winter and Spring, particularly in rising real estate, wholesale and raw material prices.

"We must continue to hold the line," he said. "We cannot permit inflation."

He agreed that there was a companionate danger of deflation, but this danger, he said, is not nearly as great in his opinion as the threat of inflation.

"Business continues good," the President said, citing statistics to show that retail sales are up 10 per cent over the same period of last year, steel ingot production has gone up sharply since V-J day and electric power production now is only 14 per cent under the wartime peak.

The President attributed the upsurge of strikes since V-J day to the fact that parties now in dispute held their grievances in check during the war. New strikes since August, he said, totaled about 1,500, involving about 1,500,000 workers.

He said that time lost through work stoppages since August was estimated at .76 of one per cent of the total working time available.

The labor department reported yesterday that the working time loss attributable to strikes in progress last month was the highest on record amounting to 7,800,000 man days of idleness or 1.27 per cent of all available working time. Strikes in October totaled 680 and involved 825,000 workers, the department said.

Mr. Truman said in answer to news conference questions that if the United Nations organization operates like it should, there would be no need in the future for meeting (Continued on Page Two)

(Continued from Page One) war department sources, may not be able to leave Washington for several days or perhaps a week or two.

Hurley reiterated his charges that "double-dealing" state department "career men" were operating behind-the-scenes to sabotage American foreign policy. He charged specifically that they had undermined his attempts to unify China's opposing factions.

Secretary of State Byrnes began his own inquiry into Hurley's accusations against career diplomats, calling for all department records and letters dealing with the situation in China. He was keeping in close touch with developments in congress.

Byrnes gave Hurley his full backing yesterday, saying there had been no change in the American policy that the former ambassador had pursued in China. The secretary said he had guaranteed Hurley, before he resigned, that any opposing state department subordinates would be fired.

The state department policy, Byrnes said, is always to back an ambassador over career men. In his personal inquiry, Byrnes was interested primarily in the records of two career men most strongly objected to by Hurley—George Atcheson, Jr., and John Stewart Service. They were among the ten subordinate foreign service men recalled from China at Hurley's request.

Atcheson is now political adviser to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, supreme allied commander in Japan, and Service also is on MacArthur's staff. Service was arrested last summer on a federal charge of unauthorized possession of state department documents, but was later cleared by a federal grand jury.

In the house, Rep. Albert D. Gore, D. Tenn., and Rep. Christian A. Herter, R. Mass., teamed up to introduce a resolution calling for a special seven-member committee to investigate the recruitment and training of foreign service personnel, and the administration and application of foreign policy to occupied areas formerly held by the enemy.

Herter, who in a recent tour of Europe found "the whole foreign service system demoralized," said that since the Army plans to transfer control of occupied territories next year to civilian administrators, he wants to know how these civilians will be selected and trained.

Gore hoped the resolution would produce an investigation covering the full American policy applying to all occupied and liberated areas. "We want to find out if any officials are working at cross purposes or if anyone is being undermined," Gore said. "We want to know what we're doing there, what our policy is and how that policy is being carried out by the foreign service."

The resolution produced a rare instance of a house committee member favoring establishment of a special group to work within the province of his own committee. Rep. John Vorys, R. O., of the foreign affairs committee, said he would support the Gore-Herter resolution.

Vorys took this position because, as he explained it, foreign affairs committee chairman Sol Bloom, D. N. Y., had refused to start an investigation of Hurley's charges.

In the senate, a sharp dispute developed between Chairman Connally of the foreign relations committee and Sen. Kenneth S. Wherry, R. Neb., who introduced a resolution to establish a special five-member foreign policy investigating committee in the senate.

Connally said the investigation should and would be conducted by his committee, but Wherry asked for a special committee to make "a full and complete investigation into the policies, objectives and personnel of the state department."

Connally was critical of the manner of Hurley's exit, asserting that he could have better served the nation by returning to China without "a fuss."

"It is an amazing thing," Connally said, "that an ambassador should make such a dramatic resignation. Just because a clerk or two somewhere down in the service doesn't agree with him, he says he's going to resign."

He described Hurley's position as "ridiculous."

Sen. Styles Bridges, R. N. H., argued back that Hurley was "a great American."

prepared to discuss the 30-per cent pay boost issue with Ford Motor company at negotiating sessions tomorrow. Initial talks with Ford have been confined to a company proposal that the union take financial responsibility for wildcat strikes.

Ford asked formally yesterday that the UAW pay the company $5 a day for each union member taking part in an unauthorized walkout. Although not immediately rejected, the proposal was described by Richard T. Leonard, the union's Ford director, as "unrealistic."

In other automotive disputes, striking Ford workers at Windsor, Ont., across the river from Detroit, were to vote today on a formula drawn up by Canadian Labor Minister Humphrey Mitchell to end an 11-week walkout.

The steel strike margin, generally, ran somewhat lower than pre-election union predictions, with the vote in the heavily-organized Pittsburgh district supply below the countrywide total.

Balancing in 320 Pittsburgh plants showed a vote of 113,214 to 28,966, or approximately four-to-one in favor of a strike.

Workers in the large steel producing states of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois and Indiana voted overwhelmingly, for the most part, in favor of a strike. Several close contests developed, however, and employees of a few small plants voted against the strike.

The strike vote was requested by CIO President Murray when negotiations for a $2-a-day wage increase broke down with the U. S. Steel Corp. and other leading companies.

Industry spokesmen claimed wages could not be raised so long as the OPA held the lid on steel prices. Murray, in turn, contended that war profits could more than cover the pay boost.

The largest strike poll in history came as congress acted to eliminate the wartime strike machinery under which the election was conducted. Steel workers voting between shifts near plants and one pits balloted on the out-dated question:

"Do you wish to permit a disruption of war production in wartime?"

the United States could stay aloof. Grew replied that he felt "very definitely" that the U. S. had to draw the line somewhere.

Brewster then referred to Grew's statement yesterday that Japanese papers featured American isolationist statements. He said he wanted to read "the most distinguished statement on that subject" — President Roosevelt's September 16, 1940, address in which he said American boys would not be sent to fight in a foreign war.

MEMBERS FINED FOR MISSES IN ROTARY QUIZ

An interesting, instructive and entertaining program was presented at the Rotary Club's lunch meeting in Pickaway Arms Thursday, by Glen D. Phillips, past president.

The meeting was designated as "Rotary Day" and a program explaining the ideals and obligations of Rotarians was presented in a novel way under the direction of Mr. Phillips, chairman of the classification, membership information committee.

Questions were asked about Rotary by Mr. Phillips and Rotarians were called upon to stand up if they had the answer to the question. Each held an answer, but had to fit it to the question. Members who gave the wrong answer to the questions on the "Rotary quiz" were fined 10 cents and several were so dealt with to add much mirth to the occasion.

Before the quiz began routine business was conducted by Norb Cochran, president, and a song, "That Rotary Smile," was led by Carl Leist songleader. Dan Long, a visiting Rotarian was a guest. Frank Barnhill Jr., a discharged veteran, was the guest of his father and Edward Hedges was also a guest.

I. W. Kinsey gave the answer to how extensive the Rotary organization was as follows: "On January 1, 1945, there were 5,825 Rotary Clubs in 50 or more countries and/or geographical regions. There are Rotary Clubs in most of the principal cities of six continents. On January 1, 1945, there were 235,550 members."

ATOMIC BOMB WARNING GIVEN

Urey said, "but it will be much more exciting when this building becomes an important and probable target for atomic bombs in that future war."

When an atom war comes, he continued, the country attacked would probably have concealed the launching sites for its atomic bombs and hence would be able to retaliate and destroy the enemy's cities too. After that, he said, "we start a war with ordinary weapons and finish it that way."

"Any course that it took," he added, "would be disastrous for victor and vanquished."

Urey said the time to do something about this threat to mankind's future is "now or preferably three months ago." He said atom bombs "must not be made by any country and must not be stored any place in the world if we are to have any feeling of security. . . on this all too small planet."

(Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, head of the Army's atomic bomb project, told the committee yesterday the U. S. was continuing atomic bomb production.)

Urey advocated atomic energy control through the United Nations organization "which would be so effective that no person or group of persons in any nation could manufacture atomic bombs without detection and without being brought to trial and punishment."

"This means a sacrifice of some of the national sovereignty of this and other countries. I would rather submit to this, with police officers armed with side arms able to arrest me for violating a law not to make atomic bombs, than to be threatened along with an entire city with destruction by atomic bombs from UNO planes for a similar violation. I believe either of these would be better than an atomic war."

STATE BUILDING PLANS DELAYED BY HIGH COSTS

COLUMBUS, Nov. 29.—Two factors today threatened to delay indefinitely a major portion of Ohio's $17,000,000 construction program for state mental hospitals.

Most important factor was the high cost of construction and the consequent reluctance of the state controlling board, whose approval is necessary before money appropriated by the legislature is spent, to release the funds.

On the few projects the welfare board has submitted to the controlling board, the lowest bids have been higher than the architect's estimate and the legislative appropriation.

In two cases, recognized as emergencies, the board granted extra money. It allowed more than the $900,000 appropriated for buildings at the Mt. Vernon state sanatorium, and granted funds above the $120,000 voted for a cottage at the Girl's Industrial School at Delaware.

In other cases, however, the controlling board has held back approval of additional funds, and has advised the welfare department, state universities and other agencies that it will release no more funds above those actually appropriated.

Lindbergh Shot Down Jap Plane

The famous flier who thrilled the world with his "Lone Eagle" trans-Atlantic flight in 1927, had worked out flying methods which made possible almost doubling the range of the Lightning P-38 fighter. How important this was in the SWPA, where principal Japanese targets were far distant from our bases, cannot be over-estimated.

How successful his methods, which consisted mostly of conserving gasoline by throttle control, were is best told by the communiqué issued by MacArthur's headquarters on October 13, which gave the news of the Balikpapan raid of October 10—except, of course, for Lindbergh's part in it.

That communiqué reported that five groups of heavy bombers—were B-24 Liberators—had dropped 135 tons of high explosive bombs on Balikpapan. They had been escorted by American fighters, which had flown a round trip of 1,500 miles, and had shot down most of the 36 Japanese fighters destroyed. Our losses were three fighters and one bomber.

In other words, the distance our fighters could fly to protect our bombers on their raids had been almost doubled. Kenney and other air force leaders gave Lindbergh most of the credit.

But the communiqué didn't report that Lindbergh had gone along, in his own words, "just to see how it works out."

He was flying with America's finest fighter pilots, Maj. Richard Ira Bong, of Poplar, Wis., whose score of 40 enemy planes destroyed made him this country's top-ranking ace of all time, was in the formation. He got his 29th and 30th that day. Maj. Thomas B. McGuire, of Ridgefield, N. J., second-ranking ace, was there. There wasn't a green pilot among the more than 30 fighters on the mission.

McGuire was to die later strafing a Jap destroyer in the Philippines, and Bong in a test flight of a jet plane in California. Both told me, in interviews before their deaths:

"Lindbergh was as hot a pilot as any of us. He would have been out there knocking off Japs every day if Kenney had let him."

37TH DIVISION SHIPS DUE IN STATES DEC. 3

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 29.—Men of the 37th (Buckeye) division will start arriving on the west coast on or about Dec. 3, and all but the first of the seven ships bringing them from Manila will dock here.

The Weltvreden, which left Manila Nov. 16, with 1200 troops of the 148th Infantry regiment, will land at San Pedro.

The General Mitchell, carrying Maj. Gen. Robert S. Beightler, division commanding general; Brig. Gen. Leo Kreber, Columbus, division artillery commander; division headquarters, and 4000 other 37th division men, is due to arrive Dec. 12.

Other division units arrive on the Pueblo, Dec. 10 or 12; the Sea Corporal, Dec. 13; the Kota Ageng, Dec. 14; the General Howard, Dec. 14, and the Kota Inten, Dec. 15. Although 16,500 men are coming back as members of the 37th, only about 6,000 belonged to the 37th while overseas, and only a handful of these were a part of the original Ohio national guard.

Deaths and Funerals

JOHN H. MILLER

John Herbert Miller, 49, well-known Pickaway county farmer, died Wednesday at 8:40 p. m. in Berger hospital following a heart attack suffered Tuesday at his Pickaway township home. A hemorrhage at the base of the brain was the immediate cause of his death.

He was the son of William H. and the late Laura Rauck Miller and was born near Hallsville. He was twice married, his first wife who was Ruth Farabee, died in 1923.

Surviving are his father, now living in South Bloomfield; his widow, Vera Slough Miller, and four children, John Ward Miller, a son by his deceased wife, who is with the Army air corps on Guam, Marilyn, Herbert and Linda of the home; a brother, Henry Miller, Chillicothe, and two sisters, Mrs. Goldie Miller, of Pickaway township, and Mrs. Betty Blue, Frankfort.

Mr. Miller was a trustee of Pickaway township and was also a member of the local lodge of Elks.

Funeral services under the direction of C. J. Ware, Chillicothe, will be held from the funeral home, Sunday, at 2 p. m. the Rev. S. C. Elisea, officiating, with burial in Grandview cemetery, Chillicothe. Friends may call at the Pickaway township home Friday afternoon until 10 a. m. Sunday.

recommendations on strengthening of federal conciliation services, use of the impartial umpire system for settlement of grievances under a labor contract, a permanent continuing committee of eight top labor and management leaders and the elimination of race discrimination in the hiring of workers.

Conference Secretary George W. Taylor disclosed that the executive committee had not abandoned hopes of reaching agreement on a statement on wages. The CIO wants a vote on its proposal that the conference endorse collective bargaining on higher wages. This proposal and two others are still being considered by a special subcommittee.

Many prominent officials here were gloomy about the prospects for industrial peace despite any agreements that the conference can reach before adjournment.

Two union representatives predicted that difficulties over wages would become steadily more severe. And they foresaw clashes with industry over proposals for legislative curbs on labor. Management delegates have said they will ask congress to impose strike curbs by law because of labor's failure to accept them voluntarily at the conference.

The meeting went into the last stages of its work under shadow of a threat that President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers may still bolt. He put delegates on notice yesterday that he felt the UMW would be given a "class B membership" in the conference if the rules committee report were adopted.

Lewis had asked the committee to recommend that unanimous agreement be required for adoption of all conference measures. The committee on two occasions, however, upheld a proposal that a vote of 15 out of the 18 members on each side be enough for a final decision.

The conference moved toward a climax with the industrial picture darker than the day it convened. Auto workers are on strike and steel workers have voted to strike, all in demands over higher wages.

In addition, the labor department reported that loss of working time through strikes during October was the highest on record. Work stoppages in progress during the month totaled 680, involved 825,000 workers and caused 7,800,000 man days of idleness — 127 per cent of all available time.

A collision involving a Try-Me cab driven by Harold E. Cassidy, 424½ East Mill street and a car driven by Cliff Miller, route 1, Cincinnati, at Court and Mound streets at 6:50 p. m. Wednesday was reported to the police. The cab stopped for a traffic light and was hit by the other car, from behind police said. The rear end of the cab and the right fender and foglight of the car were damaged, police reported.

A collision at 11 a. m. Wednesday at Court and Corwin streets involving a Try-Me cab driven by Clarence R. Boltenhouse, 154 York street, and Marvin H. Rife, soldier of Stoutsville, was also reported. The accident happened back of a traffic light and the front end of the cab and the rear end of the car were damaged when the cab hit the back of the car, police said.

In a Tuesday accident at Court and Mound streets a car driven by W. W. Smith of Huntington, W. Va., hit a car driven by Charles Brown, 203 West Main street, which had stopped in front of a traffic light, damage to the left front of the Smith car and to the rear end of the Brown car resulting, police said.

In another accident Tuesday on South Court street, cars driven by Glenn Wilson, London, and Herman Wollenweber, Chillicothe, collided, damage to the right door, running board and fender of the Wilson car and to the front end and rear fender of the other car resulting, police said. Wollenweber claimed that the Wilson car pulled out of driveway from Purina Mills in his path.

POLICE HOLD YOUTH WHO TRIED TO TAKE POISON

Clarence Willoughby, 27, of 144 East Water street, was being held Thursday by Cincinnati police for investigation after police reported that he had attempted twice to take poison.

He was picked up at 2:30 a. m. Thursday on West Main street. Willoughby has been recently discharged from the service. Police indicated that he was having marital troubles.

ings of the big three or any other type of special, top-level, international conferences.

The President said that it was these special conferences that ruined the League of Nations. He said he opposed them for that reason, preferring instead to see UNO do its job.

A basic overhaul of U. S. policies in Germany was recommended yesterday by Byron Price, former censorship director who recently concluded an investigative mission in Germany for the president.

Price in his report complained about the system under which one of the four powers on the control commission by a single dissenting vote could veto operations of the council. He blamed France for obstruction of the operation of Germany as an economic unit.

This veto situation, the President said, is one of the things being discussed by this government in its efforts to have at least some portions of the Potsdam declaration changed.

Mr. Truman would not give specific information about this government's suggestions for changes in the declaration, saying that he feared that a detailed discussion might prejudice the current negotiations.

Mr. Truman had reviewed the first 100 days of domestic reconversion at his news conference. He was asked to deal similarly with the first 100 days of peace on the international front, but he declined, saying that he would discuss it when the turmoil gets hot enough.

A reporter said that there seemed to be in international discussions in congress a thread of fear that Russia would not cooperate with UNO.

The President replied that this fear did not bother him. Then the same reporter spoke of another fear in some quarters here that Russian failure to cooperate might lead to another war. The President said he would discuss that situation later.

FAVORS DISCUSSIONS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—President Truman said today it would be a good idea for representatives of General Motors Corp. and striking CIO automobile workers to get together and discuss their differences. The President made this remark at a news conference at about the same time the UAW in Detroit appealed to him directly to intervene in the General Motors shutdown.

SOLONS DEMAND HURLEY CHARGES GET HEARING

Senate Committee Plans To Begin Inquiry Monday, Connally States

war department sources, may not be able to leave Washington for several days or perhaps a week or two.

Hurley reiterated his charges that "double-dealing" state department "career men" were operating behind-the-scenes to sabotage American foreign policy. He charged specifically that they had undermined his attempts to unify China's opposing factions.

Secretary of State Byrnes began his own inquiry into Hurley's accusations against career diplomats, calling for all department records and letters dealing with the situation in China. He was keeping in close touch with developments in congress.

Byrnes gave Hurley his full backing yesterday, saying there had been no change in the American policy that the former ambassador had pursued in China. The secretary said he had guaranteed Hurley, before he resigned, that any opposing state department subordinates would be fired.

The state department policy, Byrnes said, is always to back an ambassador over career men. In his personal inquiry, Byrnes was interested primarily in the records of two career men most strongly objected to by Hurley—George Atcheson, Jr., and John Stewart Service. They were among the ten subordinate foreign service men recalled from China at Hurley's request.

Atcheson is now political adviser to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, supreme Allied commander in Japan, and Service also is on MacArthur's staff. Service was arrested last summer on a federal charge of unauthorized possession of state department documents, but was later cleared by a federal grand jury.

In the house, Rep. Albert D. Gore, D. Tenn., and Rep. Christian A. Herter, R. Mass., teamed up to introduce a resolution calling for a special seven-member committee to investigate the recruitment and training of foreign service personnel, and the administration and application of foreign policy to occupied areas formerly held by the enemy.

Herter, who in a recent tour of Europe found "the whole foreign service system demoralized," said that since the Army plans to transfer control of occupied territories next year to civilian administrators, he wants to know how these civilians will be selected and trained.

Gore hoped the resolution would produce an investigation covering the full American policy applying to all occupied and liberated areas. "We want to find out if any officials are working at cross purposes or if anyone is being undermined," Gore said. "We want to know what we're doing there, what our policy is and how that policy is being carried out by the foreign service."

The resolution produced a rare instance of a house committee member favoring establishment of a special group to work within the province of his own committee. Rep. John Vorys, R. O., of the foreign affairs committee, said he would support the Gore-Herter resolution.

Vorys took this position because, as he explained it, foreign affairs committee chairman Sol Bloom, D. N. Y., had refused to start an investigation of Hurley's charges.

In the senate, a sharp dispute developed between Chairman Connally of the foreign relations committee and Sen. Kenneth S. Wherry, R. Neb., who introduced a resolution to establish a special five-member foreign policy investigating committee in the senate.

Connally said the investigation should and would be conducted by his committee, but Wherry asked for a special committee to make "a full and complete investigation into the policies, objectives and personnel of the state department."

Connally was critical of the manner of Hurley's exit, asserting that he could have better served the nation by returning to China without "a fuss."

"It's an amazing thing," Connally said, "that an ambassador should make such a dramatic resignation. Just because a clerk or two somewhere down in the service doesn't agree with him, he says he's going to resign."

He described Hurley's position as "ridiculous."

Sen. Styles Bridges, R. N. H., argued back that Hurley was "a great American."

Steel Workers Favor Strike By 5-1 Margin; Vote Costs $300,000

prepared to discuss the 30-per cent pay boost issue with Ford Motor company at negotiating sessions tomorrow. Initial talks with Ford have been confined to a company proposal that the union take financial responsibility for wildcat strikes.

Ford asked formally yesterday that the UAW pay the company $5 a day for each union member taking part in an unauthorized walkout. Although not immediately rejected, the proposal was described by Richard T. Leonard, the union's Ford director, as "unrealistic."

In other automotive disputes, striking Ford workers at Windsor, Ont., across the river from Detroit, were to vote today on a formula drawn up by Canadian Labor Minister Humphrey Mitchell to end an 11-week walkout.

The steel strike margin, generally, ran somewhat lower than predictions, with the vote in the heavily-organized Pittsburgh district supply below the countryside total.

Balloting in 320 Pittsburgh plants showed a vote of 113,214 to 28,966, or approximately four-to-one in favor of a strike.

Workers in the large steel producing states of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois and Indiana voted overwhelmingly, for the most part, in favor of a strike. Several close contests developed, however, and employees of a few small plants voted against the strike.

The strike vote was requested by CIO President Murray when negotiations for a $2-a-day wage increase broke down with the U. S. Steel Corp. and other leading companies.

Industry spokesmen claimed wages could not be raised so long as the OPA held the lid on steel prices. Murray, in turn, contended that war profits could more than cover the pay boost.

The largest strike poll in history came as congress acted to eliminate the wartime strike machinery under which the election was conducted. Steel workers voting between shifts near plants and ore pits balloted on the out-dated question:

"Do you wish to permit a disruption of war production in wartime?"

GREW ON STAND AS DISASTER PROBE RESUMES

Former Ambassador To Japan Is Cross-Examined On Earlier Statements

The United States could stay aloof. Grew replied that he felt "very definitely" that the U. S. had to draw the line somewhere.

Brewster then referred to Grew's statement yesterday that Japanese papers featured American isolationist statements. He said he wanted to read "the most distinguished statement on that subject" — President Roosevelt's September 16, 1940, address in which he said American boys would not be sent to fight in a foreign war.

"Do you recall whether or not that statement was published in Japan at the time?"

"No sir, I cannot,"

Rep. John W. Murphy, D. Pa., said the President had made statements expressing other points of view.

"I hope that will keep politics out of this investigation," he told Brewster.

"Well," said Barkley, "so that we can keep politics out of it, I suggest that the whole speech be put in the record."

Sen. Scott W. Lucas, D. Ill., said he would "at the proper time put other statements by Mr. Roosevelt in the record."

When an atom war comes, he continued, the country attacked would probably have concealed the launching sites for its atomic bombs and hence would be able to retaliate and destroy the enemy's cities too. After that, he said, "we start a war with ordinary weapons and finish it that way."

"Any course that it took," he added, "would be disastrous for victor and vanquished."

Urey said the time to do something about this threat to mankind's future is "now or preferably three months ago." He said atom bombs "must not be made by any country and must not be stored any place in the world if we are to have any feeling of security. . . on this all too small planet."

"This means a sacrifice of some of the national sovereignty of the United States," Urey said, "but it is a sacrifice that must be made if we are to have any feeling of security. . . on this all too small planet."

Questions were asked about Rotary by Mr. Phillips and Rotarians were called upon to stand up if they had the answer to the question. Each held an answer, but had to fit it to the question. Members who gave the wrong answer to the questions on the "Rotary quiz" were fined 10 cents and several were so dealt with to add much mirth to the occasion.

Before the quiz began routine business was conducted by Norb Cochran, president, and a song, "That Rotary Smile," was led by Carl Leist songleader. Dan Long, a visiting Rotarian was a guest. Frank Barnhill Jr., a discharged veteran, was the guest of his father and Edward Hedges was also a guest.

I. W. Kinsey gave the answer to how extensive the Rotary organization was as follows: "On January 1, 1945, there were 5,825 Rotary Clubs in 50 or more countries and/or geographical regions. There are Rotary Clubs in most of the principal cities of six continents. On January 1, 1945, there were 235,550 members."

ings of the big three or any other type of special, top-level, international conferences.

The President said that it was these special conferences that ruined the League of Nations. He said he opposed them for that reason, preferring instead to see UNO do its job.

A basic overhaul of U. S. policies in Germany was recommended yesterday by Byron Price, former censorship director who recently concluded an investigative mission in Germany for the President.

Price in his report complained about the system under which one of the four powers on the control commission by a single dissenting vote could veto operations of the council. He blamed France for obstruction of the operation of Germany as an economic unit.

This veto situation, the President said, is one of the things being discussed by this government in its efforts to have at least some portions of the Potsdam declaration changed.

Mr. Truman would not give specific information about this government's suggestions for changes in the declaration, saying that he feared that a detailed discussion might prejudice the current negotiations.

Mr. Truman had reviewed the first 100 days of domestic reconstruction at his news conference. He was asked to deal similarly with the first 100 days of peace on the international front, but he declined, saying that he would discuss it when the turmoil gets hot enough.

A reporter said that there seemed to be in international discussions in congress a threat of fear that Russia would not cooperate with UNO.

The President replied that this fear did not bother him.

Then the same reporter spoke of another fear in some quarters here that Russian failure to cooperate might lead to another war. The President said he would discuss that situation later.

FAVORS DISCUSSIONS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—President Truman said today it would be a good idea for representatives of General Motors Corp. and striking CIO automobile workers to get together and discuss their differences. The President made this remark at a news conference at Detroit appealed to him directly to intervene in the General Motors shutdown.

FARM TRACTOR TIRES STILL SCARCE ARTICLES

Despite lifting of restrictions, the supply of farm tractor and implement tires will not improve noticeably in the next two or three months, it was predicted today by commodity specialists of the Farm Bureau Cooperative Association, Columbus.

The supply will continue short even though production is much greater than before the war. This was blamed on the large increase in the number of implements on rubber, and the replacements which are now needed for the first tractors and machines to use pneumatic tires.

BOB VALENTINE VISITS KOREA

Circleville Soldier Tells About Experiences In Far East

PFC. Robert Valentine, one of two sons of Mr. and Mrs. Loring Valentine, of East Mound street, who have been serving in widely-separated theaters of war, has written a very interesting account of a trip he made through Korea, a trip which he terms, "a trip that I shall never forget," and also writes of the difficulties he had getting to Korea in the first place.

His brother, Sgt. Donald Valentine, who has been serving in the European theater with General George Patton's famous fighting Third Army, is expected to arrive home soon after being away 27 months since his last furlough at home, 24 months of which time was spent in the European war theater. On June 14, eight days after V-day, Donald was moved to France and participated in campaigns in France, Luxembourg, Belgium and Germany, all the way through the bitter fighting until the war ended.

Robert has written to his parents telling of the difficulties his unit encountered due to the typhoon on Okinawa. He writes, "Acting on quick orders to get out of the way of the typhoon, our outfit got on board a LST and put out to sea. Instead of running into safety, however, we ran right into the typhoon. For hours and even days we didn't know just what would happen to our bunch, but we were spared once more and landed a week later in Korea."

"Korea had at one time been a beautiful country but is very badly run down now," he writes. "People here are scarcely more than what I'd call destitute but their condition is improving slowly. There are some beautiful places to visit and from what I've seen here, conditions must have been at one time quite the opposite of conditions now."

"My work here isn't too bad. You see, since moving the Brigade, we have heated living quarters instead of tents. It is quite cold here compared to the Ryukyu islands. We have been issued new winter clothing. Our eats are pretty good also. We now have steaks instead of spam and cold cuts. I just returned from a 10-day tour all over Korea as I drove the captain around to inspect the power plants."

"We went in a jeep and the roads are very mountainous and in a terrible condition. We went armed for some of the Jap-loving Koreans who still take pot shots at the Americans. There are no bridges so one must drive through the streams. One place we went across on a ferry pulled by two Koreans, and did they grunt trying to get started across. On our tour, we ate with our different outfits here."

"We had an accident on a mountainous road and our jeep upset and rolled over twice, but without much damage except to the windshield, torn top, and bent frame. No one was hurt and we all got back to our base in good shape. The trip was one that I shall never forget."

Robert's friends can mail him Christmas cards at the following address: PFC. Robert D. Valentine (35885128), Hdq. and Hdq. Co., 52221st Engineer Construction Brigade, APO 901, c/o PM, San Francisco, Calif.

"Instead of going on a land-buying spree, the farmer should make immediate plans to repair the damage to his soil's fertility level caused by all-out crop production during the war.

"Future security will be much better assured by better soil management methods on a well-equipped and economically-operated farm than on vast fields without efficient management.

"As the peace years progress farmers will find it much more profitable to increase the per acre yield on existing crop land than to bring additional acres under cultivation.

"Attention to a few essentials of soil management will reduce the cost of crop production per unit and make each acre do a better crop yielding job. Such essentials include growing legumes to enrich the soil's nitrogen and organic matter supply, the regular application of adequate quantities of mixed fertilizers containing nitrogen, phosphorus and potash, liming and contour plowing.

"Soil fertility replenishment will have an important bearing on the continuation of farm prosperity in peace time. Farmers will have the full co-operation of the fertilizer industry in their soil-rebuilding projects. The industry has a plant capacity sufficient to meet all of agriculture's peacetime needs when raw materials and experienced factory help are available in sufficient volume once more."

COUNTRY HOMES NEW FEATURE OF FHA PROGRAM

Low Priced Homes To Get
Financial Help From
Federal Bureau

A new feature—"country homes"—has been added to the program of the Federal Housing Administration, according to FHA District A. L. Guckert.

In a federal expansion of its facilities, Mr. Guckert said all approved lending institutions had been notified that FHA stands ready to insure financing of low priced homes located on small plots of land adjacent to the suburban areas surrounding cities.

Director Guckert said FHA had outlined the new proposal to lending institutions and declared that FHA, insofar as is practicable and in keeping with the mandates of the National Housing Act, intends to broaden its operations in order to assist private enterprise to more nearly meet the total housing needs of this country.

"Accordingly," FHA announced, "we are now authorized to include as eligible for mortgage insurance that class of properties which, for want of a better term, we are designating as country homes. We have in mind those homes in outlying areas, with a small plot of land, on which the owner resides but upon the products of which he does not depend for a livelihood. Such a property is eligible for mortgage insurance if it meets our minimum property requirements and has market acceptance. It should be part of an established neighborhood of similar properties or part of a neighborhood to be established with proper safeguards.

"It is not our purpose to add impetus to the decentralization of urban areas—but rather to recognize a very definite need and desire on the part of a segment of the market to live in the country. This has been going on for years and the results can be observed in the outlying areas of any of our cities.

"We believe we now offer a sounder method of meeting this need which will result in better homes in better neighborhoods and will, we hope, save both home owner and community from the losses occasioned by badly planned or haphazard developments.

"We believe that this more liberal policy with respect to country homes is both desirable and timely—the shorter work week, improved transportation, the desires of many returning veterans for such places, all have added to our conviction that such a program should have a positive and active part in our agenda.

"This offers an opportunity for mortgage lending in a field which heretofore has not been too well provided for. Quite often in the past, the seeker for such a home has had to work out his problem, and particularly his financing, in a hard way. It is our purpose that such home seekers should have a more available and helpful plan."

STRIKERS WILL GET RELIEF IF THEY NEED IT

LANSING, Mich., Nov. 29.—Striking General Motors workers will receive relief from their county social welfare boards in Michigan in all cases where need is proven, a United Press survey disclosed.

Welfare directors in the seven counties with GMC payrolls of about 100,000 workers, agreed that where need is proven, the strike-idle worker will receive relief assistance but all directors denied that such relief could be considered state or county subsidization of the strike.

The directors said that since ballots in strike votes were secret, there was no way to prove that the individual worker had approved the strike and that children of striker's families should not be made to suffer.

Before a striker can obtain such financial help, he must prove there is an emergency, medical or hospitalization need and that he has sought other employment.

Mitchell S. Jachminski, director of Wayne county, where some 30,000 GM workers are affected in Detroit, summed up welfare executives' opinion in the remark "we feel that relief should be granted on the basis of need. It makes no difference to us whether a man is out of work because of a strike, illness or injury."

Probate Judge Reel G. Allen said a committee would send names of recommended board members who are war veterans to the selective service headquarters in Columbus within a few days.

Allen said he was confident that a board would be formed within a short time.

The original board resigned in October after sending home nine boys scheduled for induction. Several of the youths have since volunteered for various branches of the armed forces.

Members of the board selection committee are Judge Allen, Common Pleas Judge Harry M. Rankin and T. H. Craig, a local merchant.

To prepare candied sweet potatoes quickly, scrub and slice them. Melt 1 tbsp. butter in frying pan, put in one-third c. brown sugar, put in sweet potatoes and brown lightly. Add water to cover the bottom of the pan, sprinkle lightly with salt; cover and simmer until potatoes are tender, about 15 minutes. Or the cooking can be done in the oven.

COUNTRY HOMES NEW FEATURE OF FHA PROGRAM

Low Priced Homes To Get
Financial Help From
Federal Bureau

A new feature—"country homes"—has been added to the program of the Federal Housing Administration, according to FHA District A. L. Guckert.

In a federal expansion of its facilities, Mr. Guckert said all approved lending institutions had been notified that FHA stands ready to insure financing of low priced homes located on small plots of land adjacent to the suburban areas surrounding cities.

Director Guckert said FHA had outlined the new proposal to lending institutions and declared that FHA, insofar as is practicable and in keeping with the mandates of the National Housing Act, intends to broaden its operations in order to assist private enterprise to more nearly meet the total housing needs of this country.

"Accordingly," FHA announced, "we are now authorized to include as eligible for mortgage insurance that class of properties which, for want of a better term, we are designating as country homes. We have in mind those homes in outlying areas, with a small plot of land, on which the owner resides but upon the products of which he does not depend for a livelihood. Such a property is eligible for mortgage insurance if it meets our minimum property requirements and has market acceptance. It should be part of an established neighborhood of similar properties or part of a neighborhood to be established with proper safeguards.

"It is not our purpose to add impetus to the decentralization of urban areas—but rather to recognize a very definite need and desire on the part of a segment of the market to live in the country. This has been going on for years and the results can be observed in the outlying areas of any of our cities.

"We believe we now offer a sounder method of meeting this need which will result in better homes in better neighborhoods and will, we hope, save both home owner and community from the losses occasioned by badly planned or haphazard developments.

"We believe that this more liberal policy with respect to country homes is both desirable and timely—the shorter work week, improved transportation, the desires of many returning veterans for such places, all have added to our conviction that such a program should have a positive and active part in our agenda.

"This offers an opportunity for mortgage lending in a field which heretofore has not been too well provided for. Quite often in the past, the seeker for such a home has had to work out his problem, and particularly his financing, in a hard way. It is our purpose that such home seekers should have a more available and helpful plan."

STRIKERS WILL GET RELIEF IF THEY NEED IT

LANSING, Mich., Nov. 29—Striking General Motors workers will receive relief from their county social welfare boards in Michigan in all cases where need is proven, a United Press survey disclosed.

Welfare directors in the seven counties with GMC payrolls of about 100,000 workers, agreed that where need is proven, the strike-idle worker will receive relief assistance but all directors denied that such relief could be considered state or county subsidization of the strike.

The directors said that since ballots in strike votes were secret, there was no way to prove that the individual worker had approved the strike.

VETS DECLINE FAYETTE DRAFT BOARD POSTS

WASHINGTON, C. H. O., Nov. 29—Three of five World War II veterans recommended to replace the Fayette county draft board which resigned rather than send men to be inducted while strikes were in progress today have refused the posts.

Probate Judge Reel G. Allen said a committee would send names of recommended board members who are war veterans to the selective service headquarters in Columbus within a few days. Allen said he was confident that a board would be formed within a short time.

The original board resigned in October after sending home nine boys scheduled for induction. Several of the youths have since volunteered for various branches of the armed forces.

Members of the board selection committee are Judge Allen, Common Pleas Judge Harry M. Rankin and T. H. Craig, a local merchant.

UNNECESSARY STRIKES
THE old motto, "strike while the iron is hot," was grand during the war years, and has left a record for useful production of which this nation can always be proud. The great conflicts from which we emerged victorious were won in the factory no less than on the battle field, and will always have their share of the glory and pride of victory.
But these recent industrial strikes are a sad and unfortunate sequence. Observers say that our people in general are now taking things too easy, and facing too lightly the tremendous job of reconstruction.
A moderate amount of rest is right and necessary; but this time the workers and planners of our nation should be settled down again more busily to a peace job requiring perhaps as many years of stout effort as the war itself did. It should be evident that a prolonged wave of industrial strikes harms the whole nation.
There are ample facilities in this country to make sure that all large and important groups may get a fair deal, in their work and their pay. And in any question of doubt or fact, those facilities should be used, so that the nation as a whole may get on with the recovery job.

LOST HUMORIST
THE United States does not have enough humorists, and with the death of Robert Benchley has one less. Known for his radio work as well as his writings, Benchley had a gift of lighthearted inconsequence which made the drabdest of everyday details absurd. No one else had quite the same touch. The titles of his books typified his mixture of incongruities: "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea, or 'David Copperfield'." "My Ten Years in a Quandary, or How They Grew". Making parody of popular books of historical revelation: "After 1903, What?" and "Inside Benchley."
Neither he nor the Canadian Stephen Leacock, who died not long ago, had the same mass appeal as Will Rogers, whose death some ten years back caused national grief. But they cheered up their readers, and the world certainly needs cheering.

How viewpoints change! For the youngsters, ice on the sidewalk is something to slide on; for the grown-up, something to slip on.

Inside WASHINGTON
Here's Reason OPA Was Slow on Car Price List | Truman's Unemployment Legislation Seen Dead
Special to Central Press
● WASHINGTON—By now those millions of American jalopy drivers who won't believe the war is really-for-sure over until they find themselves tooling a glistening new car through the traffic have a pretty fair idea what said glistening new car is going to set them back in the bankroll.
The Office of Price Administration's announced ceiling prices on the new 1946 models indicates that, on the average, they won't cost any more than the 1942 jobs did.
However, what has puzzled those millions of American jalopy drivers with streamlined dreams is why the good news was so long in getting to him.
Weeks and weeks ago, OPA was all set to announce the new car prices. Price Administrator Chester Bowles said that these prices would be revealed in "four or five days." The deadline came and went and receded into the past. Still no news.
What forced postponement of the price announcement until just the other day was one of the most powerful lobbies Washington has ever seen.
The automobile dealer who would be required to absorb manufacturers' price increases under the OPA plan converged on Congress and gained a hearing before the House Small Business committee.
So potent were their activities that more than 800 congressmen registered their presence at the first session. About half of them remained for the meeting.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS
By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—The diplomacy of the world is falling deeper daily into what might be called a fuddle game.

It is a match in which the contestants know very well what is being done, but pretend officially they do not. Preposterous pretensions are maintained in the news of the day, the public is left befuddled.

The transparency of the deception develops only when you rub the soot of propaganda from the news glass of this amazing world hour and peer inside the furnished facts.
Consider, for instance, the revolution in Iran. The revolution was started by a crowd calling itself the Democratic party. All the newsguff emanating from the revolution is that which the occupying Russians care to let out. And the picture they let out is that great patriots of liberty are fighting, bleeding and dying for the cause of freedom of their province—sort of like our struggle for freedom from Britain.

This is laughably, grotesquely untrue. The Democratic party is the old Communist party under a new name. They used to call it the party of the masses, but when the Moslems, who monopolize all Iran with their devout ideas of God, worked up a sweeping animus against the agnostic or atheist Communists, the Communists broke off and called themselves Democrats.

Now these great Democrats of Stalin, if successful, would break their province off from Iran and establish the pretense of separate sovereignty while being subject to adjoining Russia.

Stalin could thus work his way further toward the oil, expand his hegemony and push back the Moslems. This is the only freedom they want—to wrest the people from Iran and put them under the thumb of Moscow.

But the revolution is even funnier than that. The Russians occupied this territory during the war to protect a line of supplies from us so Nazi saboteurs could not destroy it. For a long time, it was the only land route we had through which to help Russia. Americans and British occupied the southern half of the route. All agreed not only to get out at the war end, but (at the specific insistence of Mr. Roosevelt) composed a treaty guaranteeing the independence of Iran (meaning its protection against Russia, because Russian domination is what the Moslems feared from a united nations victory).

We got our combat force out sometime back, leaving only service military and the British, I hear, also removed their fighting men.

The Russians raised some dispute as to when the end of the war officially would be, but finally agreed to March 2 for their withdrawal, which this government, in its new note, has attempted to move up to January 1. The world is thus presented with this ludicrous situation:

A Communist revolution has been going on in a Russian-occupied zone. Presented to the world as a serious revolution, it is actually about the same as if an American revolution broke out in the American occupied zone of Germany, and we pretended aloofness, bottled up the territory from the British and Russians, censored and propagandized the movement to let it succeed.

Injuries to the Knee Joint
By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

PERHAPS because of the way the knee joint is constructed, it seems to be susceptible to a large number of different types of injuries. As a result of these injuries, various parts of the joint may be damaged.

In the knee joint there is a lining membrane, a capsule around the joint, and cartilages within the joint. The lining membrane may become inflamed as a result of injuries. The ligaments on the inner side of the knee may become strained. Cartilages within the joint may become dislocated.

Inflammation of Membrane
Inflammation of the lining membrane is called synovitis. An injury which produces synovitis may tear the capsule around the joint and if the blood vessels in the capsule are injured, a bloody fluid collects in the joint.

The knee is swollen and the knee cap is pushed forward. The knee is tender throughout, due to the increased pressure of the fluid in the joint. The patient is unable to extend the knee and it cannot be bent completely.

Treating Synovitis
In treating synovitis it is suggested by Doctor G. Edward Crane of Rhode Island that the knee be put in a cast and kept there for from three to five weeks.

Strain of the ligaments on the inner side of the knee may result from a twisting of the joint. The ligaments may be partially torn. When this happens the amount of fluid in the joint is slightly increased and there is tenderness over the inner side of the joint. In treating this type of injury it is well to put on a cast stretching from the toes to the hip. The

COSTS A LOT OF POINTS
ONE LEAD, which many fair players make, costs them a lot of points during a year's span. That is the opening of a suit headed by the Q-J, but lacking the 10. If the dummy contains the 10, and the declarer has either the ace or king on his side, that lead will nearly always give up a trick. When the top honors are in opposite hands, with the 10 and another card in dummy, the declarer can score three tricks in the suit after that lead, where only two would be possible if he had to open it himself.

● diplomat at a recent news conference.
Byrnes was asked why the department permitted a week to elapse before denying a dispatch from Ankara, Turkey, which stated that the United States would back that country against the Russians over the issue of the Dardanelles.
Apparently, the secretary was in a bad mood that day. He snapped back at the inquiring reporter with the remark that the press and radio held no right to demand any statement from the state department.
The secretary could have brushed the whole matter aside by saying that it took just so long to check all the facts and to get such a statement cleared by all concerned.
Naturally, Byrnes' statement will not be soon forgotten, either by the 150 reporters and radio commentators present or by some members of Congress who have charged in the past that the department has been unwilling to keep Capitol Hill or the American public informed concerning international affairs.
● SOME CONGRESSMEN WERE CONVERSING in the lobby of the House of Representatives. One was expressing himself to another as being "very perturbed" over the growing number of persons out on strike.
"What is the latest you've heard on that?" he inquired.
"I don't know," commented a member of the group, "but I've heard that there are 51 million people still working."
● ADMINISTRATION LEADERS in the House now have but little hope that President Truman's unemployment emergency legislation can be resurrected and passed.
The Senate-approved bill has been pigeon-holed by the House ways and means committee and there is nothing so far to indicate that it intends to reverse itself.
The "heat" has been put on four Democratic members to reverse themselves and permit the legislation to come before the House for a vote, but apparently without avail. The four Democrats joined with the Republicans in voting to defer consideration "indefinitely."
Mr. Truman originally asked Congress to establish a national maximum unemployment compensation of $25 for 26 weeks, but the Senate deleted this provision.

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE
THOMAS ROYDE came last. He sat solemn and stiff, blinking a little like an owl.
He was home from Malaya—first time for eight years. Had been in the habit of staying at Gull's Point ever since he was a boy. Mrs. Audrey Strange was a distant cousin—and had been brought up by his family from the age of nine. On the preceding night he had gone to bed just before 11. Yes, he had heard Mr. Neville Strange leave the house, but had not seen him. Neville had left at about twenty past ten, or perhaps a little later. He himself had heard nothing during the night. He was up and in the garden when the discovery of Lady Tressilian's body had been made. He was an early riser.
There was a pause.
"Miss Aldin has told us there was a state of tension in the house. Did you notice this too?"
"I don't think so. Don't notice things much."
"That's a lie," thought Battle to himself. "You notice a good deal. I should say—more than most."
No, he didn't think Neville Strange had been short of money in any way. He certainly had not seemed so. But he knew very little about Mr. Strange's affairs.
"How well did you know the second Mrs. Strange?"
"I met her here for the first time."
Battle played his last card.
"You may know, Mr. Royde, that we've found Mr. Neville Strange's fingerprints on the weapon. And we've found blood on the sleeve of the coat he wore last night."
He paused. Royde nodded.
"He was telling us," he muttered.
"I'm asking you frankly: Do you think he did it?"
Thomas Royde never liked to be hurried. He waited for a minute—which is a very long time—before he answered:
"Don't see why you ask me? Not my business. It's yours. Should say myself—very unlikely."
"Can you think of anyone who seems to you more likely?"
Thomas shook his head.
"Only person I think likely can't possibly have done it. So that's that."
"And who is that?"
But Royde shook his head more decidedly.
"Couldn't possibly say. Only my private opinion."
"It's your duty to assist the police."
"Tell you any facts. This isn't fact. Just idea. And it's impossible, anyway."
"We didn't get much out of him," said Leach when Royde had gone. Battle agreed.
"No, we didn't. He's got something in his mind—something quite definite. I'd like to know what it is. This is a very peculiar sort of crime, Jim, my boy."
The telephone rang before Leach could answer. He took up the receiver and spoke. After a minute or two of listening he said, "Good," and slammed it down.

STARSSAY—
For Thursday, November 29
ACCORDING to the lunar transits of this day, there may be strange, sinister and subtle situations to drag into the open and thoroughly vanquish before cherished hopes and objectives may be successfully developed or put over. Owing to the treacherous and sinister undercurrents of designing persons and enemies it would be well to keep alert to all insidious entanglements, deep-laid and possibly invisible, baffling or curious.
Undercover situations may eventually develop hidden beauties, glamor or curious skills difficult to accept or properly evaluate. Imagination has scope.
Those whose birthday it is may find themselves in a year of intrigue, bewildering circumstances or unique situations which may be difficult to elude or sidestep, as they are curious, subtle, visionary, or, as well, sinister. Ingenuity and clear vision should be brought to bear on such problems, snares or entanglements, in which business as well as private life are susceptible to fraud, and betrayal.
Keen understanding, astute but quiet action and common sense are of vital importance. Possibly a "dog eat dog" policy may assist.

UNNECESSARY STRIKES

THE old motto, "strike while the iron is hot," was grand during the war years, and has left a record for useful production of which this nation can always be proud. The great conflicts from which we emerged victorious were won in the factory no less than on the battle field, and will always have their share of the glory and pride of victory.

But these recent industrial strikes are a sad and unfortunate sequence. Observers say that our people in general are now taking things too easy, and facing too lightly the tremendous job of reconstruction.

A moderate amount of rest is right and necessary; but this time the workers and planners of our nation should be settled down again more busily to a peace job requiring perhaps as many years of stout effort as the war itself did. It should be evident that a prolonged wave of industrial strikes harms the whole nation.

There are ample facilities in this country to make sure that all large and important groups may get a fair deal, in their work and their pay. And in any question of doubt or fact, those facilities should be used, so that the nation as a whole may get on with the recovery job.

LOST HUMORIST

THE United States does not have enough humorists, and with the death of Robert Benchley has one less. Known for his radio work as well as his writings, Benchley had a gift of lighthearted inconsequence which made the drabest of everyday details absurd. No one else had quite the same touch. The titles of his books typified his mixture of incongruities: "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," "David Copperfield," "My Ten Years in a Quandary, or How They Grew". Making parody of popular books of historical revelation: "After 1903, What?" and "Inside Benchley."

Neither he nor the Canadian Stephen Leacock, who died not long ago, had the same mass appeal as Will Rogers, whose death some ten years back caused national grief. But they cheered up their readers, and the world certainly needs cheering.

How viewpoints change! For the youngsters, ice on the sidewalk is something to slide on; for the grown-up, something to slip on.

Here's Reason OPA Was Slow on Car Price List

Truman's Unemployment
Legislation Seen Dead

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—By now those millions of American jalopy drivers who won't believe the war is really over until they find themselves tooling a glistening new car through the traffic have a pretty fair idea what said glistening new car is going to set them back in the bankroll.

The Office of Price Administration's announced ceiling prices on the new 1946 models indicates that, on the average, they won't cost any more than the 1942 jobs did.

However, what has puzzled those millions of American jalopy drivers with streamlined dreams is why the good news was so long in getting to him.

Weeks and weeks ago, OPA was all set to announce the new car prices. Price Administrator Chester Bowles said that these prices would be revealed in "four or five days." The deadline came and went and receded into the past. Still no news.

What forced postponement of the price announcement until just the other day was one of the most powerful lobbies Washington has ever seen.

The automobile dealer who would be required to absorb manufacturers' price increases under the OPA plan converged on Congress and gained a hearing before the House Small Business committee.

So potent were their activities that more than 800 congressmen registered their presence at the first session. About half of them remained for the meeting.

SECRETARY OF STATE JIMMY BYRNES was anything but

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—The diplomacy of the world is falling deeper daily into what might be called a fuddle game.

It is a match in which the contestants know very well what is being done, but pretend officially they do not. Preposterous pretensions are maintained in the news of the day, the public is left befuddled.

The transparency of the deception develops only when you rub the soot of propaganda from the news glass of this amazing world hour and peer inside the furnished facts.

Consider, for instance, the revolution in Iran. The revolution was started by a crowd calling itself the Democratic party. All the newsguff emanating from the revolution is that which the occupying Russians care to let out. And the picture they let out is that great patriots of liberty are fighting, bleeding and dying for the cause of freedom of their province—sort of like our struggle for freedom from Britain.

This is laughably, grotesquely untrue. The Democratic party is the old Communist party under a new name. They used to call it the party of the masses, but when the Moslems, who monopolize all Iran with their devout ideas of God, worked up a sweeping animus against the agnostic or atheist Communists, the Communists broke off and called themselves Democrats.

Now these great Democrats of Stalin, if successful, would break their province off from Iran and establish the pretense of separate sovereignty while being subject to adjoining Russia.

Stalin could thus work his way further toward the oil, expand his hegemony and push back the Moslems. This is the only freedom they want—to wrest the people from Iran and put them under the thumb of Moscow.

But the revolution is even funnier than that. The Russians occupied this territory during the war to protect a line of supplies from us so Nazi saboteurs could not destroy it. For a long time, it was the only land route we had through which to help Russia. Americans and British occupied the southern half of the route. All agreed not only to get out at the war end, but (at the specific insistence of Mr. Roosevelt) composed a treaty guaranteeing the independence of Iran (meaning its protection against Russia, because Russian domination is what the Moslems feared from a united nations victory).

We got our combat force out sometime back, leaving only service military and the British, I hear, also removed their fighting men.

The Russians raised some dispute as to when the end of the war officially would be, but finally agreed to March 2 for their withdrawal, which this government, in its new note, has attempted to move up to January 1. The world is thus presented with this ludicrous situation:

A Communist revolution has been going on in a Russian-occupied zone. Presented to the world as a serious revolution, it is actually about the same as if an American revolution broke out in the American occupied zone of Germany, and we pretended aloofness, bottled up the territory from the British and Russians, censored and propagandized the movement to let it succeed.

Injuries to the Knee Joint

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

PERHAPS because of the way the knee joint is constructed, it seems to be susceptible to a large number of different types of injuries. As a result of these injuries, various parts of the joint may be damaged.

In the knee joint there is a lining membrane, a capsule around the joint, and cartilages within the joint. The lining membrane may become inflamed as a result of injuries. The ligaments on the inner side of the knee may become strained. Cartilages within the joint may become dislocated.

Inflammation of Membrane
Inflammation of the lining membrane is called synovitis. An injury which produces synovitis may tear the capsule around the joint and if the blood vessels in the capsule are injured, a bloody fluid collects in the joint.

The knee is swollen and the knee cap is pushed forward. The knee is tender throughout, due to the increased pressure of the fluid in the joint. The patient is unable to extend the knee and it cannot be bent completely.

Treating Synovitis

In treating synovitis it is suggested by Doctor G. Edward Crane of Rhode Island that the knee be put in a cast and kept there for from three to five weeks.

Strain of the ligaments on the inner side of the knee may result from a twisting of the joint. The ligaments may be partially torn. When this happens the amount of fluid in the joint is slightly increased and there is tenderness over the inner side of the joint.

In treating this type of injury it is well to put on a cast stretching from the toes to the hip. The cast is kept on from six to eight weeks and following its removal, the application of heat and massage is found useful in speeding up complete recovery.

Severe Twisting

Severe twisting of the knee may also cause dislocation of the cartilages. When this happens the patient cannot extend the knee and movement causes pain. Frequently the joint locks so that the knee cannot be either bent or straightened. Often in such instances an operation is necessary for removing the torn cartilage.

Still another condition affecting the knee is known as Osgood-Schlatter's disease, which occurs in persons under twenty-one years of age. It appears to develop especially when there is poor circulation to the joint. In this disorder there is a separation of a tendon which is attached to the knee cap. As a general rule, keeping the knee immovable for two months will cure this disturbance.

When any injury to the knee joint occurs an X-ray examination should be made to determine the condition present. Then proper treatment may be carried out.

"The Authority on Authorities"

COSTS A LOT OF POINTS

ONE LEAD, which many fair players make, costs them a lot of points during a year's span. That is the opening of a suit headed by the Q-J, but lacking the 10. If the dummy contains the 10, and the declarer has either the ace or king on his side, that lead will nearly always give up a trick. When the top honors are in opposite hands, with the 10 and another card in dummy, the declarer can score three tricks in the suit after that lead, where only two would be possible if he had to open it himself.

♠ A 10 5		♥ 9 8 2

♦ 9 5 4

(Dealer South. Both sides vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	2♣	Pass
2NT	Pass	3NT	Pass

With a difficult lead to make, as he viewed it, West selected his spade Q. When the K won that, South had a marked finesse of the 10 against the J, which not only assured him three spade tricks, but also three stoppers of the suit. It gave him plenty of time for his minor suit finesses, so that he scored four tricks in clubs, two in diamonds, two in hearts and the three spades for a total of 11, or two extra tricks.

East opened after the hand that, with a holding like West's, it was vital to protect all his honors. The hearts were unbid, just as spades were, and nothing of his own would have been jeopardized by West opening that suit. Doing so would have held South to two tricks in spades, instead of three, so that the declarer would have had only one overtrick instead of two.

"Just a dinky 30 points," commented West. True enough, but on some other hand that wasted trick could mean the difference between game and no game. In any event, the extra 30 points saved every once in a while by avoidance of such plays could amount to a good many in the span of a whole season, maybe the difference between winning or losing.

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

THOMAS ROYDE came last. He sat solemn and stiff, blinking a little like an owl.

He was home from Malaya—first time for eight years. Had been in the habit of staying at Gull's Point ever since he was a boy. Mrs. Audrey Strangle was a distant cousin—and had been brought up by his family from the age of nine. On the preceding night he had gone to bed just before 11. Yes, he had heard Mr. Neville Strangle leave the house, but had not seen him. Neville had left at about twenty past ten, or perhaps a little later. He himself had heard nothing during the night. He was up and in the garden when the discovery of Lady Tressilian's body had been made. He was an early riser.

There was a pause.

"Miss Aldin has told us there was a state of tension in the house. Did you notice this too?"

"I don't think so. Don't notice things much."

"That's a lie," thought Battle to himself. "You notice a good deal, I should say—more than most."

No, he didn't think Neville Strangle had been short of money in any way. He certainly had not seemed so. But he knew very little about Mr. Strangle's affairs.

"How well did you know the second Mrs. Strangle?"

"I met her here for the first time."

Battle played his last card.

"You may know, Mr. Royde, that we've found Mr. Neville Strangle's fingerprints on the weapon. And we've found blood on the sleeve of the coat he wore last night."

He paused. Royde nodded.

"He was telling us," he muttered. "I'm asking you frankly: Do you think he did it?"

Thomas Royde never liked to be hurried. He waited for a minute—which is a very long time—before he answered:

"Don't see why you ask me? Not my business. It's yours. Should say myself—very unlikely."

"Can you think of anyone who seems to you more likely?"

Thomas shook his head.

"Only person I think likely can't possibly have done it. So that's that."

"And who is that?"

But Royde shook his head more decidedly.

"Couldn't possibly say. Only my private opinion."

"It's your duty to assist the police."

"Tell you any facts. This isn't fact. Just ideas. And it's impossible, anyway."

"We didn't get much out of him," said Leach when Royde had gone.

"Blood on the coat sleeve is human," he announced. "Same blood group as Lady T. Looks as though Neville Strangle is in for it."

Battle had walked over to the window and was looking out with considerable interest.

"A beautiful young man out there," he remarked. "Quite beautiful and a definite wrong 'un, I should say. It's a pity Mr. Latimer—for I feel that that's Mr. Latimer—was over at Easterhead Bay last night. He's the type that would smash in his own grandmother's head if he thought he could get away with it and if he knew he'd make something out of it."

He went to it.

"Well, there wasn't anything in it for him," said Leach. "Lady T's death doesn't benefit him in any way whatever." The telephone rang again. "Blast this phone, what's the matter now?"

"Hullo. Oh, it's you, doctor? What? Come around, has she? What? What?"

He turned his head. "Uncle, just come and listen to this."

Battle came over and took the phone. He listened, his face as usual showing no expression. He said to Leach:

"Get Neville Strangle, Jim."

When Neville came in, Battle was just replacing the phone on its hook.

Neville, looking white and spent, stared curiously at the Scotland Yard superintendent, trying to read the emotion behind the wooden mask.

"Mr. Strangle," said Battle. "Do you know anyone who dislikes you very much?"

Neville stared and shook his head.

"Sure?" Battle was impressive.

"I mean, sir, someone who does more than dislike you—someone who—frankly—hates you?"

Neville sat bolt upright.

"No. No, certainly not. Nothing of the kind."

"Think, Mr. Strangle. Is there no one you've injured in any way—"

Neville flushed.

"There's only one person I can be said to have injured and she's not the kind who bears rancor. That's my first wife when I left her for another woman. But I can assure you that she doesn't hate me. She's—she's been an angel."

The superintendent leaned forward across the table.

"Let me tell you, Mr. Strangle; you're a very lucky man. I don't say I liked the case against you—I didn't. But it was a case. It would have stood up all right, and unless the jury happened to have liked your personality it would have hanged you."

"You speak," said Neville, "as though all that were past."

"It is past," said Battle. "You've been saved, Mr. Strangle, by pure chance."

Neville still looked inquiringly at him.

"After you left her last night," said Battle, "Lady Tressilian rang the bell for her maid."

He watched while Neville took it in.

"After . . . Then Barrett saw her—"

"Yes. Alive and well. Barrett also saw you leave the house before she went in to her mistress."

Neville said:

"But the niblick—my fingerprints—"

"She wasn't hit with that niblick. Dr. Lazenby didn't like it at the time. I saw that. She was killed with something else. That niblick was put there deliberately to throw suspicion on you. It may be by someone who overheard the quarrel and so selected you as a suitable victim, or it may be because—"

He paused, and then repeated his question:

"Who is there in this house that hates you, Mr. Strangle?"

"I've got a question for you, Doctor," said Battle.

They were in the doctor's house after returning from the nursing home where they had had a short interview with Jane Barrett.

Barrett was weak and exhausted but quite clear in her statement.

She had been just getting into bed after drinking her senna when Lady Tressilian's bell rang. She had glanced at the clock and saw the time—25 minutes past 10.

She had put on her dressing gown and gone down. She had heard a noise in the hall below and had looked over the balustrade.

"It was Mr. Neville just going out. He was taking his raincoat down from the hook."

"What suit was he wearing?"

"His gray pin stripe. His face was very worried and unhappy looking. He showed his arms into his coat as though he didn't care how he put it on. Then he went out and banged the front door behind him. I went on to her ladyship. She was very drowsy, poor dear, and couldn't remember why she had rang for me—she couldn't at all—a poor lady. But I beat up her pants and brought her a fresh glass of water and settled her comfortably."

"She didn't seem upset or afraid of anything?"

"Just tired, that's all. I was tired myself. Yawning. I went up and went right off to sleep."

That was Barrett's story and it seemed impossible to doubt her genuine grief and horror at the news of her mistress's death.

They went back to Lazenby's house and it was then that Battle announced that he had a question to ask.

"Ask away," said Lazenby.

"What time do you think Lady Tressilian died?"

"I've told you. Between 10 o'clock and midnight."

"I know that's what you said. But it wasn't my question. I asked you what you, personally, thought."

"Off the record, eh?"

"All right. My guess would be in the neighborhood of 11 o'clock."

"That's what I wanted you to say," said Battle.

"Glad to oblige. Why?"

"Never did like the idea of her being killed before 10-20. Take Barrett's sleeping draught—it wouldn't have got to work by then. That sleeping draught shows that the murder was meant to be committed a good deal later—during the night. I'd prefer midnight, myself."

"Could be. Eleven is only a guess."

"But it definitely couldn't be later than midnight?"

Beatrice Fairfax
Dies At Home In Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Beatrice Fairfax will give no more advice to the lovelorn.

Mrs. Marie Manning Casch, 70, known to millions of Americans as the "Beatrice Fairfax" whose daily newspaper column tackled problems of the lonely human heart, died at her home here of heart failure yesterday. The funeral will be private.

Although she had many imitators, Mrs. Casch was the first author of "Advice to the lovelorn" columns and her name has been famed in song, story and humorous anecdote for many years.

It was back in 1898 that the young Miss Manning, working as an early forerunner of the "sob sister" on the old New York Journal, was asked by the late Arthur Brisbane to answer some letters that came in to the Journal seeking advice on love problems "as a public service."

The resulting flood of additional letters, all seeking love hints, led Brisbane to start a daily "advice to the lovelorn" column, the first to appear in an American daily, with "Miss Fairfax" at the helm.

She chose the name Fairfax because of her family home in Fairfax, Va., near here and the name Beatrice because of her admiration for the heroine of Dante's "Divine Comedy."

With "Beatrice Fairfax" when she died were her two sons, whom she bore after following her own advice in 1905 to return to Washington, marry and settle down.

Flaker of near Williamsport returned to Rapid City, Iowa, Sunday. During his stay his parents entertained a number of his friends and relatives at a birthday dinner in his honor. His mother accompanied him as far as Cincinnati where she is visiting with relatives.

Mrs. Elmer Merriman, East Union street, has returned home after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Merriman, Buckeye Lake. Mrs. Merriman's sister, Mrs. Jess Hagler, Washington C. H., was another guest at the Buckeye Lake home.

FUR BARGAINS
TO BE SCARCE,
BUSINESS GOOD

by Barbara Bundschu, United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK.—There'll be few bargains in furs this year, but that isn't stopping anybody as far as the furriers can see.

Fur coat prices have doubled in the last two or three years, according to Lou White, former president of the Associated Fur Coat and Trimming Manufacturers, Inc., and they'll keep going up until the nation's war-fat pocketbook has emptied itself.

Most plentiful fur on the market today is Persian lamb, White said, and there's not enough of it to meet the demand. Persian coats retail from $75 to $795. Mink, sable, stone marten and broadtail are all scarce, and there is an extreme shortage of Summer ermine because almost all of last year's crop was wiped out by disease. Labor shortages, in both manufacturing and trapping, and import difficulties have combined to keep furriers a good step behind the demand.

Best sellers, according to Jaekel, fashionable New York fur shop, are nutria and beaver, selling in the $700 to $1,000 range, mink, and a new Australian opossum, a thick grey and white fur said to have exceptional wearing qualities, which Jaekel features in a bulky teddy-bear-like great coat selling at $650, plus 20 per cent federal tax.

Wild minks average $3,500 per coat, but they go to $10,000 and higher. The darker ranch mink averages about $500 less. Muskrats, whose wearing qualities compare favorably with mink, sell between $595 and $850, for let-out skins $295 and $305 for skin-on.

Mrs. Wickensimer served a dessert course. Twenty-four members were present and guests included Mrs. Edward Minshall, Kingston, Mrs. Nona Lutz and Ann Timmons. Mrs. Timmons expressed appreciation to Mrs. Carl Gearhart for the Christmas table arrangement she made for the meeting.

The will of an actor who died recently in New Jersey left a fund to provide shoes for actors who might wear out shoe leather hunting jobs, as he himself once did.

Beatrice Fairfax Dies At Home In Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Beatrice Fairfax will give no more advice to the lovelorn.

Mrs. Marie Manning Casch, 70, known to millions of Americans as the "Beatrice Fairfax" whose daily newspaper column tackled problems of the lonely human heart, died at her home here of heart failure yesterday. The funeral will be private.

Although she had many imitators, Mrs. Casch was the first author of "advice to the lovelorn" columns and her name has been famed in song, story and humorous anecdote for many years.

It was back in 1898 that the young Miss Manning, working as an early forerunner of the "sob sister" on the old New York Journal, was asked by the late Arthur Brisbane to answer some letters that came in to the Journal seeking advice on love problems "as a public service."

The resulting flood of additional letters, all seeking love hints, led Brisbane to start a daily "advice to the lovelorn" column, the first to appear in an American daily, with "Miss Fairfax" at the helm.

She chose the name Fairfax because of her family home in Fairfax, Va., near here and the name Beatrice because of her admiration for the heroine of Dante's "Divine Comedy."

With "Beatrice Fairfax" when she died were her two sons, whom she bore after following her own advice in 1905 to return to Washington, marry and settle down.

Flaker of near Williamsport returned to Rapid City, Iowa, Sunday. During his stay his parents entertained a number of his friends and relatives at a birthday dinner in his honor. His mother accompanied him as far as Cincinnati where she is visiting with relatives.

Chaplain Speaker For Garden Club

The Rev. M. H. Frantz, assistant chaplain at Federal Reformatory, Chillicothe, was guest speaker at Clarkburg Garden club's monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. George Wickensinger, Clarkburg.

The speaker recounted experiences of his two and one half years' service in the South Pacific, where he served both as a Navy and Marine Corps chaplain. He illustrated his talk with pictures taken while on the staffs of Gen. Campbell and Adm. Halsey. He also showed photographs of flowers, which depicted what to do and what not to do in their cultivation.

Following his address, the Rev. Mr. Frantz chatted informally with the group, giving highlights of his 30,000 miles of air travel in the South Pacific area, and telling of his work at the reformatory. Mrs. Pryor B. Timmons, president, introduced the speaker and presided at the business meeting.

Reports were given by Mrs. Carl Steinhilber, treasurer; Mrs. H. E. Wein, project committee, who presented plans for landscaping at the Methodist church; and Mrs. Wilse Toole, chairman of ways and means committee. Mrs. Walter L. Hughes reviewed the council meeting and tea held Saturday at Chillicothe. Mrs. F. G. McCollister, chairman of the program committee, announced the Christmas party and dinner of the club to be given Dec. 18 at Mrs. Marion's party home. There will be an exchange of gifts.

Mrs. Wickensinger served a dessert course. Twenty-four members were present and guests included Mrs. Edward Minshall, Kingston, Mrs. Nona Lutz and Ann Timmons. Mrs. Timmons expressed appreciation to Mrs. Carl Gearhart for the Christmas table arrangement she made for the meeting.

FUR BARGAINS TO BE SCARCE, BUSINESS GOOD

by Barbara Bundschu, United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK.—There'll be few bargains in furs this year, but that isn't stopping anybody as far as the furriers can see.

Fur coat prices have doubled in the last two or three years, according to Lou White, former president of the Associated Fur Coat and Trimming Manufacturers, Inc., and they'll keep going up until the nation's war-fat pocketbook has emptied itself.

Most plentiful fur on the market today is Persian lamb, White said, and there's not enough of it to meet the demand. Persian coats retail from $575 to $795. Mink, sable, stone marten and broadtail are all scarce, and there is an extreme shortage of Summer ermine because almost all of last year's crop was wiped out by disease. Labor shortages, in both manufacturing and trapping, and import difficulties have combined to keep furriers a good step behind the demand.

skin treatment.

Moulton lamb, similar in appearance to beaver but coarser in texture, a generally long-wearing fur, sells in the $200 price range. Gray and sable dyed Russian squirrels are available at about $500.

As always, the best buy in a fur coat is a classic style. Jaekel offers a new version of the day-time to evening sleeve, which it alternates with the popular turn-back wide cuff.

The new "push-up" sleeve has a tight elasticized cuff on a wide sleeve. It is worn down for daytime, pushed up to drape a wide flaring shorter sleeve displaying gloves or bracelets for evening.

Three-quarter and seven-eighths lengths are favored, but the full-length coat is still popular. Jackets are hip length.

Necklines are collarless, usually with a small neck-hugging band. Latest Parisian style featured by Jaekel, the first they have shown since '40, featured belted or cinched-in waistlines, flaring skirts and deep armholes. A belted, dolman sleeved Persian lamb, with a tight mink cuff, selling for $1,320, including tax, is fashioned after the Parisian style.

Fur neckpieces are selling well for Spring suit wear and also as accompaniment to cloth winter coats, many of which are designed for just such a topping. A two-skin mink neckpiece sells as low as $130. The popular blonde baum and stone martens average $150 per skin; Russian sables can be had at $1,000 each.

Capes and stoles of fur are also shown, in a wide variety of styles

ARMY JOINS IN FIGHT TO SAVE LIFE OF BABY

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The United States Army fought today beside 18-month-old Barbara Collins who is ill with tubercular meningitis. But doctors held little hope for her recovery.

Barbara is in Mary Immaculate hospital at Jamaica, Long Island. She is under an oxygen tent almost constantly. Dr. Ben Shapiro, chief pediatrician at the hospital, sent out an emergency call yesterday for the new experimental drug, streptomycin.

It was almost certain that Barbara, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Collins, of Queens, couldn't live without it.

But no one knew just where to obtain the drug. It has been produced only in small quantities.

Then an Army lieutenant came walking into the hospital. Under his arm he held a container of precious streptomycin. The Army had heard of Barbara's great need and released enough of the drug for treatment.

Barbara was given 50,000 units of the drug early yesterday.

"But even now I wouldn't say that her chances are very good," Shapiro said. "Only one case of tubercular meningitis on record has ever been cured—but in that case they used streptomycin."

CANNON SCORES VET HOSPITAL, HOUSING ACTION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Chairman Clarence Cannon, D., Mo., of the house appropriation committee declared today that the house "has gone off half-cocked" in approving funds for veterans housing and additional hospital facilities.

Over protests of Cannon and other committee members, the house yesterday added $158,000,000 for veterans' hospitals and $24,500,000 for housing to a $1,131,000,000 deficiency appropriation for the year ending June 30.

The committee had rejected both items, although they were recommended by the budget bureau, with a promise that they would be taken up next year.

"This is plain demagoguery," Cannon said. "It won't help the veterans and it won't help the hospital program."

Pickaway County War Loan Drive Lagging; E Bond Sales $45,450

"Pickaway county is falling way down in its obligation to buy bonds in the Victory loan drive," Clark Will, chairman of the drive, said Thursday.

"This county has always gone over the top before, but now there seems to be a big letdown in the patriotic spirit that always put Circleville, the county over the top in previous drives," he asserted.

"Only 22 per cent of the quota for E bond sales has been reported so far," he said, "and unless the county wakes up to the need for buying victory bonds," the drive will fall short.

Mr. Will reported that only $45,450 in E-bond sales had been reported so far in the drive with just a little more than a month ahead to meet the quota of $203,000. He announced that sales of $204,300 of sales of other issues to individuals out of a quota of $215,000 had been reported making the overall quota of sales, 60 per cent reached, but that countians were not backing the E-bond sales campaign as well as they should.

"The boys on the battlefield have done their job and done it well. Now it's up for us to do our part and buy bonds. They have finished their job, we should finish ours," Mr. Will said.

"We owe to our boys who were wounded fighting for us and to those who are still over there to buy bonds to take care of them and we owe it to all the boys who have come back and to the memory of those who didn't finish up our job on the homefront; so that this nation can be saved from the perils of inflation," Mr. Will added.

"We need lots of sales yet to pull us over, but with the proper spirit, we can do it. Pickaway county has never failed before and I'm sure we won't this time, but it will take a lot of extra effort from now on out to meet the quota."

TESTIMONIAL TO GO TO VETERANS

Presidential Citation Can Be Obtained From Recruiters Here

A testimonial of appreciation for honorable service rendered to the nation by members of the United States Armed Forces during World War II from the President, has been authorized for presentation to each individual eligible.

Any personnel who have served in any of the United States Armed Forces for any period between September 11, 1940 and the date to be established as 6 months after the duration of the present emergency are eligible to receive the testimonial upon honorable discharge or upon release from active duty under honorable conditions.

These testimonials are now available at the U. S. Army Recruiting Office, Room 318 Old Post Office Building, Third and State Street, Columbus, Ohio.

All veterans who were discharged prior to October 31, 1945 are invited to call in person or write the U. S. Army Recruiting Office to obtain this testimonial. The individual must present a certificate of service, a certificate of discharge or a notice of separation. In those instances where officers were discharged or relieved from active duty prior to the time certificates of service or certificates of discharge became available, suitable evidence of discharge or release from active duty under honorable conditions, such as special orders, will be accepted in lieu of certificate of service or certificate of discharge.

If veterans will leave their names and addresses with the recruiters on duty in the Post Office at Circleville on Saturday, the testimonials will either be mailed direct or if preferred may be called for the following Saturday at the Post Office.

ARMY JOINS IN FIGHT TO SAVE LIFE OF BABY

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The United States Army fought today beside 18-month-old Barbara Collins who is ill with tubercular meningitis. But doctors held little hope for her recovery.

Barbara is in Mary Immaculate hospital at Jamaica, Long Island. She is under an oxygen tent almost constantly. Dr. Ben Shapiro, chief pediatrician at the hospital, sent out an emergency call yesterday for the new experimental drug, streptomycin.

It was almost certain that Barbara, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Collins, of Queens, couldn't live without it.

But no one knew just where to obtain the drug. It has been produced only in small quantities.

Then an Army lieutenant came walking into the hospital. Under his arm he held a container of precious streptomycin. The Army had heard of Barbara's great need and released enough of the drug for treatment.

Barbara was given 50,000 units of the drug early yesterday.

"But even now I wouldn't say that her chances are very good," Shapiro said. "Only one case of tubercular meningitis on record has ever been cured—but in that case they used streptomycin."

CANNON SCORES VET HOSPITAL, HOUSING ACTION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Chairman Clarence Cannon, D. Mo., of the house appropriations committee declared today that the house "has gone off half-cocked" in approving funds for veterans housing and additional hospital facilities.

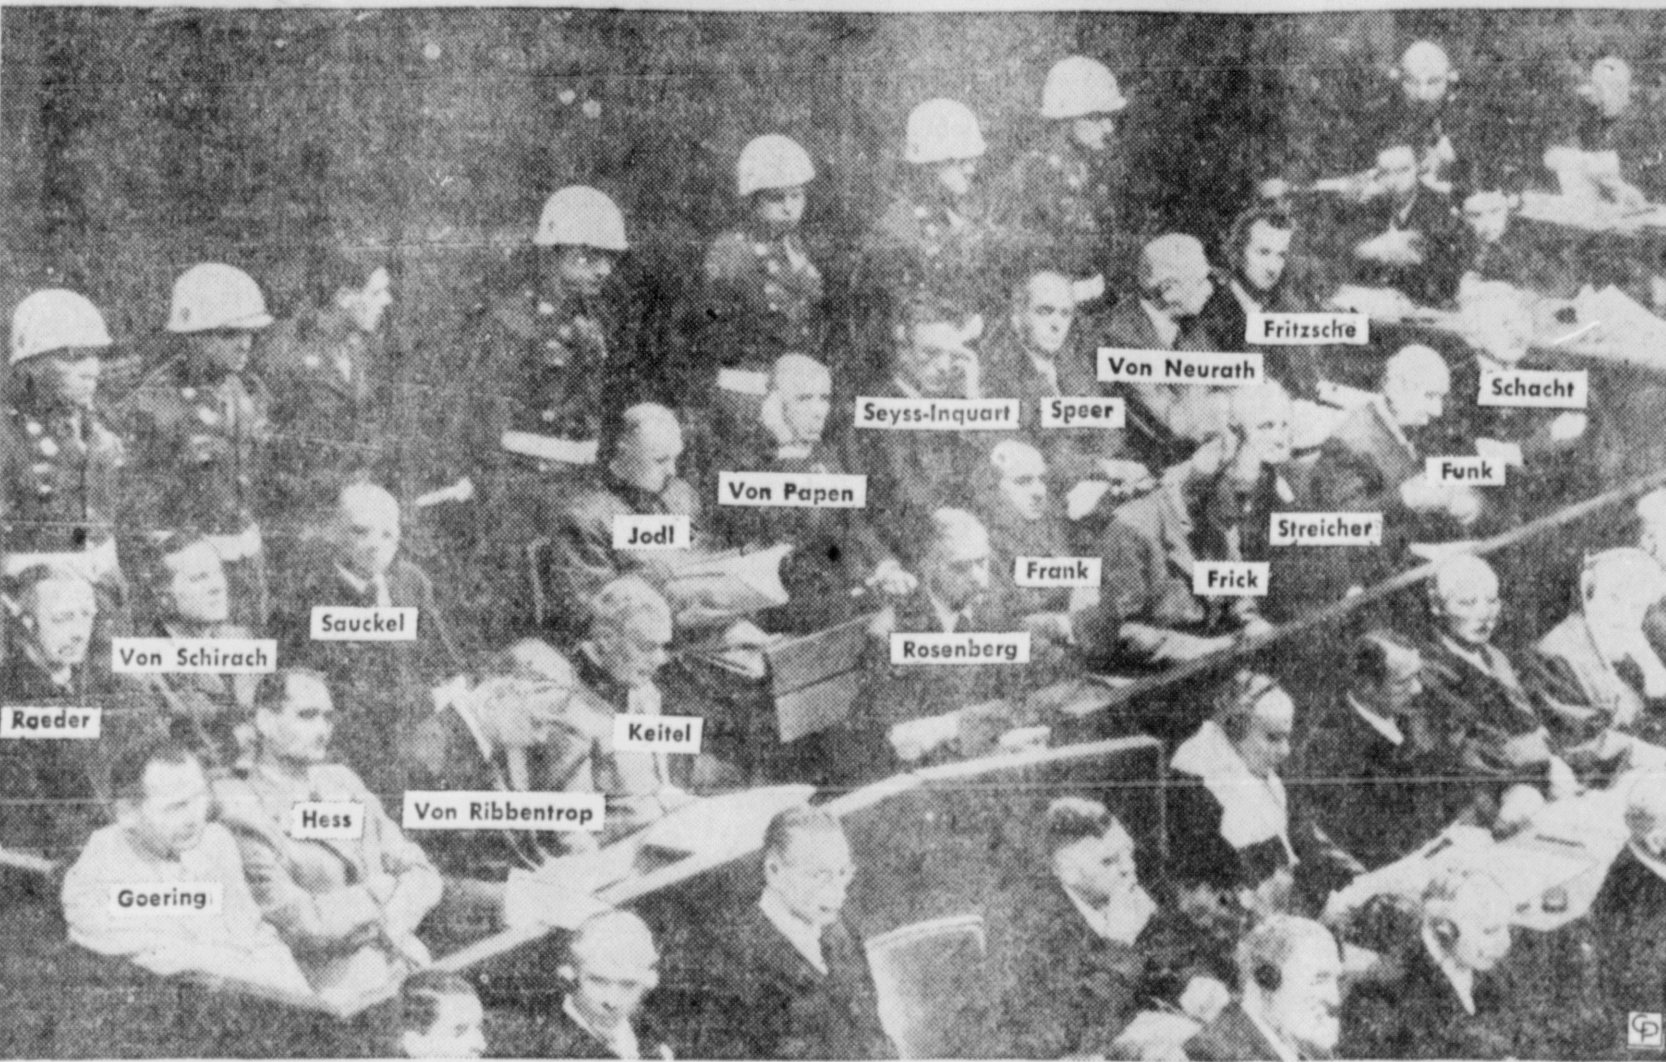

Over protests of Cannon and other committee members, the house yesterday added $158,000,000 for veterans' hospitals and $24,500,000 for housing to a $1,131,000,000 deficiency appropriation for the year ending June 30.

The committee had rejected both items, although they were recommended by the budget bureau, with a promise that they would be taken up next year.

"This is plain demagoguery," Cannon said. "It won't help the veterans and it won't help the hospital program."

EMPLOYEES OF GOVERNMENT TO GET HOLIDAYS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—President Truman has juggled the work week of government workers so that they can have four days off at Christmas and three days at New Year's.

R. R. Zimmerman, administrative assistant to the president, sent a memorandum to that effect to all department and agency heads.

Federal employees will get the Monday before Christmas off in exchange for working the following Saturday, usually a day off. They will get the day before New Year's off in exchange for working the Saturday after New Year's. In other words the work weeks beginning December 24 and December 31 will be Wednesday through Saturday.

BIG EARTHQUAKE SPENT ITSELF AT SEA BELIEF

BOMBAY, Nov. 29.—Indian experts said today that the gigantic earthquake which rocked much of India and hurled a tidal wave against the coast Wednesday morning probably spent most of its fury far out at sea.

They believed that only tremors reached land, saving the country from a catastrophe. The tidal wave struck Karachi five hours after the earthquake, and the experts believed it took that long to travel from the center of the disturbance.

Seismographs in many parts of the world indicated that it was one of the greatest earth shocks in several decades.

Pickaway County War Loan Drive Lagging; E Bond Sales $45,450

"Pickaway county is falling way down in its obligation to buy bonds in the Victory loan drive," Clark Will, chairman of the drive, said Thursday.

"This county has always gone over the top before, but now there seems to be a big letdown in the patriotic spirit that always put Circleville, the county over the top in previous drives," he asserted.

"Only 22 per cent of the quota for E bond sales has been reported so far," he said, "and unless the county wakes up to the need for buying victory bonds, the drive will fall short."

Mr. Will reported that only $45,450 in E-bond sales had been reported so far in the drive with just a little more than a month ahead to meet the quota of $203,000. He announced that sales of $204,300 of sales of other issues to individuals out of a quota of $215,000 had been reported making the overall quota of sales, 60 per cent reached, but that countings were not backing the E-bond sales campaign as well as they should.

"The boys on the battlefield have done their job and done it well. Now it's up for us to do our part and buy bonds. They have finished their job, we should finish ours," Mr. Will said.

"We owe to our boys who were wounded fighting for us and to those who are still over there to buy bonds to take care of them and we owe it to all the boys who have come back and to the memory of those who didn't to finish up our job on the homefront; so that this nation can be saved from the perils of inflation," Mr. Will added.

CHS TIGER FIVE TO MAKE DEBUT FRIDAY NIGHT

New Team To Face Lancaster Cagers At Roll And Bowl As Season Opens

Fans will be watching a new team and a new coach Friday night when the Circleville high school Tigers open the 1945-46 basketball season at Roll and Bowl.

Only one all-season regular from last season is on the squad this year, Jack Hennis. He probably will start at a forward post with his teammates chosen from a group of boys, some of whom saw action with the varsity last season while others played with the reserves.

Coach John Daugherty, serving his first season here, has been working with 11 boys from which he will choose a starting five to face Lancaster Friday. Positions are still wide open, the new coach says. Daugherty came here from Athens four years ago. He coached at Chaucer-Dover for two seasons. His only previous coaching here was the baseball team two years ago.

On the varsity squad besides Hennis are Leonard Hill and Earl Palm who saw some action with the varsity last season. Up from the reserves are Wilson Clark, Bob Steele, Jack M. Stout, Jack H. Stout, "Buzzie" Rhodes, Ed Webb, John Fissell and Bob McCoy.

"Skeet" Smallwood, who missed early season practice because of rib injuries suffered in the last football game of the season, has been working out with the reserves and will join the varsity Monday, Coach Daugherty said.

CHS reserves, who are under the direction of Steve Brudzinski, also will make their first appearance of the season Friday, meeting Lancaster reserves at 7:15 p. m. The varsity contest is set for 8:15 p. m. The Lancaster team will be changed a lot from the one that Circleville defeated in the first game of the season last season. Coach Anthony Martin lost most of his regulars and reserves last Spring.

Martin is rebuilding his club around one letter-winner, Harold Fultz, center on last year's first five. Eight lettermen lost from last year's team that went to the regional tournament at Zanesville are: Captain Darrell Gerken, Fritz Plinke, Gene Groves, Dick Altman, Roy Gordon, Dick Dunnington, Bill Thompson and Bob Williamson.

Last year's team won seven games and lost nine during the season but won four games in the tournament at Athens to win it and then lost out to a strong Canton McKinley five in the regional tournament held at Zanesville. As a result of winning the Athens tournament the Gales were considered among the top 15 basketball teams in the state of Ohio.

After beating Lancaster, Canton McKinley went on to win the regional title and then lost out to Middletown, by one-point in the semi-finals of the state classic at Toledo. Middletown lost out in the state finals to Bellevue.

In the Central Ohio League last year the Gales lost once to Newark, twice to Marietta, once to Co-shocton, twice to Zanesville, once to Dover, and once to Cambridge. The Gales won from Newark once, Dover once, Cambridge and Co-shocton once in the league. Lancaster beat Lancaster St. Mary's two games and Chillicothe one in non-league frays. The Gales' season record showed 11 on the right side of the ledger and ten on the wrong side.

COLUMBUS SET TO ENTERTAIN MINOR LEAGUES

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 29.—This sports-minded city, which as not yet fully caught its breath from a frantic football season, braced itself today for a hectic week with the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues—fancy title for the minors.

Although the official sessions do not start until Wednesday, Dec. 5, running for three days, many of the leagues will come in early for pre-convention huddles.

The American Association bigwigs will meet Sunday, Dec. 2, probably to name Roy Hamey of the Kansas City Blues as league president, succeeding George Trautman who resigned to become vice president and general manager of the Detroit Tigers.

The International and Piedmont leagues have meetings scheduled for Monday, while the Pacific Coast League, the Ohio State League and the Interstate League will get together Tuesday. Others may call meetings as delegates arrive.

The pre-convention huddles are necessitated by the size of the agenda. No less than 70 amendments to the Association's code are to be considered, some of them due to raise the temperature here several degrees.

Among the hotter issues will be the appeal of the American Association, the International League and the Pacific Coast League for a new AAA classification.

SEVEN AIRMEN MISSING SINCE C-46 EXPLODED

COOS BAY, Nov. 29.—Civilian volunteers and rescue teams from the Portland Army air base combed the heavily-wooded southern Oregon wilderness today in search of seven airmen, missing since their C-46 plane crashed Monday.

Five of 12 men aboard the giant Army transport were known to be safe. Two already had been taken to the Coos Bay City hospital for a physical checkup.

Two other survivors were being brought in over washed-out roads and hastily-constructed mountain trails from a logging camp some 40 miles from here. They stumbled upon the camp after two days of wandering through the dense forest.

A third, Flight Officer Dave Reed, Sedalia, Mo., was reported in serious condition after dangling in his parachute harness from a giant evergreen fir tree for 36 hours.

ONE PICKAWAY LEADER TO FALL FRIDAY NIGHT

Walnut Or Perry Team To Suffer First Loss; Four Other Games Booked

Most of the Pickaway county high school basketball teams will be in action Friday night as the county league gets back on schedule.

Last week's holidays interfered with Friday night games and contests were played Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, but this week all league games are set for Friday night.

There will be fast action in all five games as four teams try to protect unbeaten records and four go after their first league victories.

At New Holland, Jackson still seeking its first win, will try to hand the Hollanders their first defeat. Jackson faces the job of stopping Jim McCown, big center who has been leading the scoring in his team's games.

At least one unbeaten team will fall when Perry and Walnut clash at Walnut. The Atlanta team defeated Williamsport in its one league win. Walnut has won twice, downing Washington and edging Jackson by two points.

Washington will be after its first league win at Pickaway which has won and lost.

Saltcreek, which has lost its only league game, will be host to the veteran Monroe team which has won its only start. Monroe's height will help but Saltcreek has the advantage of its home floor.

At Williamsport, Darby, loser to Scioto in its only league tilt, will be facing a Deercreek team which wants a win after losing to Perry last week. Williamsport won over Jackson in its league opener.

Ashville plays at Groveport in a non-league game.

Darby marked up a victory at Mt. Sterling Wednesday night, winning 33-20. Co-Captain Sweet scored more points than all his opponents, totaling 21.

Darby led 8-0 the first period and 18-6 at the half. Darby reserves dropped a low-scoring game by an 11-8 score.

At Madison Mills Monday night the Darby cagers eked out a 15-14 win in a bitter battle. Madison Mills led 2-0 the first period, 6-3 at the half and 12-9 at the end of the third period. Furniss led the Darby team with nine points.

CHS TIGER FIVE TO MAKE DEBUT FRIDAY NIGHT

New Team To Face Lancaster Cagers At Roll And Bowl As Season Opens

Fans will be watching a new team and a new coach Friday night when the Circleville high school Tigers open the 1945-46 basketball season at Roll and Bowl.

Only one all-season regular from last season is on the squad this year, Jack Hennis. He probably will start at a forward post with his teammates chosen from a group of boys, some of whom saw action with the varsity last season while others played with the reserves.

Coach John Daugherty, serving his first season here, has been working with 11 boys from which he will choose a starting five to face Lancaster Friday. Positions are still wide open, the new coach says. Daugherty came here from Athens four years ago. He coached at Chaucery-Dover for two seasons. His only previous coaching here was the baseball team two years ago.

On the varsity squad besides Hennis are Leonard Hill and Earl Palm who saw some action with the varsity last season. Up from the reserves are Wilson Clark, Bob Steele, Jack M. Stout, Jack H. Stout, "Buzze" Rhodes, Ed Webb, John Fissell and Bob McCoy.

"Skeet" Smallwood, who missed early season practice because of rib injuries suffered in the last football game of the season, has been working out with the reserves and will join the varsity Monday, Coach Daugherty said.

CHS reserves, who are under the direction of Steve Brudzinski, also will make their first appearance of the season Friday, meeting Lancaster reserves at 7:15 p. m. The varsity contest is set for 8:15 p. m.

The Lancaster team will be changed a lot from the one that Circleville defeated in the first game of the season last season. Coach Anthony Martin lost most of his regulars and reserves last Spring.

Martin is rebuilding his club around one letter-winner, Harold Fultz, center on last year's first five. Eight lettermen lost from last year's team that went to the regional tournament at Zanesville are: Captain Darrell Gerken, Fritz Plinke, Gene Groves, Dick Altman, Roy Gordon, Dick Dunnington, Bill Thompson and Bob Williamson.

Last year's team won seven games and lost nine during the season but won four games in the tournament at Athens to win it and then lost out to a strong Canton McKinley five in the regional tournament held at Zanesville. As a result of winning the Athens tournament the Gales were considered among the top 15 basketball teams in the state of Ohio.

After beating Lancaster, Canton McKinley went on to win the regional title and then lost out to Middletown, by one-point in the semi-finals of the state classic at Toledo. Middletown lost out in the state finals to Bellevue.

In the Central Ohio League last year the Gales lost once to Newark, twice to Marietta, once to Co-shocton, twice to Zanesville, once to Dover, and once to Cambridge. The Gales won from Newark once, Dover once, Cambridge and Co-shocton once in the league. Lancaster beat Lancaster St. Mary's two games and Chillicothe one in non-league frays. The Gales' season record showed 11 on the right side of the ledger and ten on the wrong side.

COLUMBUS SET TO ENTERTAIN MINOR LEAGUES

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 29—This sports-minded city, which as not yet fully caught its breath from a frantic football season, braced itself today for a hectic week with the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues—fancy title for the minors.

Although the official seasons do not start until Wednesday, Dec. 5, running for three days, many of the leagues will come in early for pre-convention huddles.

The American Association bigwigs will meet Sunday, Dec. 2, probably to name Roy Hamey of the Kansas City Blues as league president, succeeding George Trautman who resigned to become vice president and general manager of the Detroit Tigers.

The International and Piedmont leagues have meetings scheduled for Monday, while the Pacific Coast League, the Ohio State League and the Interstate League will get together Tuesday. Others may call meetings as delegates arrive.

The pre-convention huddles are necessitated by the size of the agenda. No less than 40 amendments to the Association's code are to be considered, some of them due to raise the temperature here several degrees.

Among the hotter issues will be the appeal of the American Association, the International League and the Pacific Coast League for a new AAA classification.

STONEROCK HITS 578 HIGH SCORE IN PIN LEAGUE

Harold Stonerock's 221 high game and 578 total set the pace for members of the Business Men's Bowling league Wednesday night at Roll and Bowl.

Circleville Roofing had high team score of 2528 but lost two games to Gordon's. In other matches Elks won three games from Kiwanis No. 2 and Rotary took two from Kiwanis No. 1.

SEVEN AIRMEN MISSING SINCE C-46 EXPLODED

COOS BAY, Nov. 29—Civilian volunteers and rescue teams from the Portland Army air base combed the heavily-wooded southern Oregon wilderness today in search of seven airmen, missing since their C-46 plane crashed Monday.

Five of 12 men aboard the giant Army transport were known to be safe. Two already had been taken to the Coos Bay City hospital for a physical checkup.

Two other survivors were being brought in over washed-out roads and hastily-constructed mountain trails from a logging camp some 40 miles from here. They stumbled upon the camp after two days of wandering through the dense forest.

A third, Flight Officer Dave Reed, Sedalia, Mo., was reported in serious condition after dangling in his parachute harness from a giant evergreen fir tree for 36 hours.

Dr. Donald Long, of Coos Bay,

ONE PICKAWAY LEADER TO FALL FRIDAY NIGHT

Walnut Or Perry Team To Suffer First Loss; Four Other Games Booked

Most of the Pickaway county high school basketball teams will be in action Friday night as the county league gets back on schedule.

Last week's holidays interfered with Friday night games and contests were played Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, but this week all league games are set for Friday night.

There will be fast action in all five games as four teams try to protect unbeaten records and four go after their first league victories.

At New Holland, Jackson still seeking its first win, will try to hand the Hollanders their first defeat. Jackson faces the job of stopping Jim McCown, big center who has been leading the scoring in his team's games.

At least one unbeaten team will fall when Perry and Walnut clash at Walnut. The Atlanta team defeated Williamsport in its one league win. Walnut has won twice, downing Washington and edging Jackson by two points.

Washington will be after its first league win at Pickaway which has won and lost.

Saltcreek, which has lost its only league game, will be host to the veteran Monroe team which has won its only start. Monroe's height will help but Saltcreek has the advantage of its home floor.

At Williamsport, Darby, loser to Scioto in its only league tilt, will be facing a Deercreek team which wants a win after losing to Perry last week. Williamsport won over Jackson in its league opener.

Ashville plays at Groveport in a non-league game.

Darby marked up a victory at Mt. Sterling Wednesday night, winning 33-20. Co-Captain Sweet scored more points than all his opponents, totaling 21.

Darby led 8-0 the first period and 18-6 at the half. Darby reserves dropped a low-scoring game by an 11-8 score.

At Madison Mills Monday night the Darby cagers eked out a 15-14 win in a bitter battle. Madison Mills led 2-0 the first period, 6-3 at the half and 12-9 at the end of the third period. Furniss led the Darby team with nine points.

NEWS Behind the NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

You see, only a few Iranian troops were in the province to fight the Communists. With the Russians keeping the bulk of other Iranian forces out, the local Communists were permitted to gain foothold. That is the only way they could possibly have made a revolution.

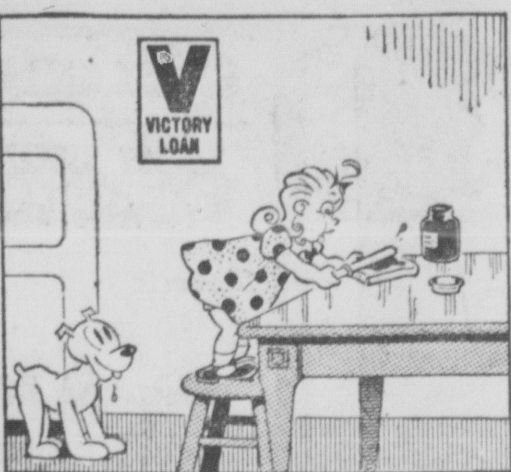

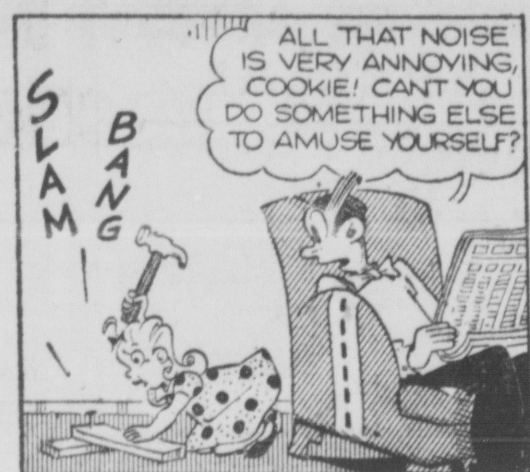

These are the subtleties behind the American note. You may recall advance dispatches indicated Mr. Byrnes would ask Moscow for information about the revolution. That would have been ironical.

We have a consul in the revolution area. The Russians isolated him from communications with our legation in Teheran. We could get nothing from him, although this most suspicious fact was not mentioned in our note.

The note then represents our first and very mild effort to drop this whole false front with which the world is confronted (the condition in Manchuria and Europe is in every way similar). If it sounds vague and its troop-withdrawal plan excessively mild, it nevertheless represented the beginnings of an effort to break the fuddle game.

Unless this beginning is carried forward effectively, genuine understandings of any kind can hardly be anticipated in such a way as to restore the world either to peace or sanity. Surely it is evident by now that agreements in a fuddle game are not worth making.

wide tone range that FM is capable of rendering.

Q. Will FM be available in all models?

A. Radio manufacturers are expected to use the FM principle in midget, table, portable, console and other models. Obviously, the best reproduction will be possible only in receivers having loud speakers of adequate size.

Q. What about FM prices?

A. FM sets will be somewhat higher because of somewhat higher manufacturing costs. The difference, however, will not be prohibitive.

Q. How can one be sure FM is dependable? What is its background?

A. FM, as well as AM, long has been known in the science of radio. Credit for the invention of the present FM system of broadcasting and receiving goes to Maj. Edwin H. Armstrong, professor of electrical engineering at Columbia university, New York, who also invented the original regenerative circuit.

In 1940 the Federal Communications Commission approved FM for commercial broadcast operation, at the same time praising its performance. A number of manufacturers introduced FM transmitters and receivers later in that year, and until civilian production was stopped in March, 1942, energetically pushed both the development and sale of FM equipment.

Many further improvements, however, have been made in the new FM sets and in no sense is FM "in the experimental stage."

Q. How many FM receivers are in use today, not counting the new models?

A. Close to 500,000 compared to around 60,000,000 AM sets.

Q. Will FM supplant AM as the standard broadcasting method?

A. No, since present developments are in the direction of having the two systems supplement each other in affording radio listeners every type of broadcasting - to be further augmented in the near future by the addition of television.

Q. Summing up briefly, what are some of the principal advantages of FM from the standpoint of the listener?

A. 1. Practical freedom from natural static.

2. Suppression of other interfering noises - noises originating in electrical appliances and machinery.

3. High fidelity reception - the full range of the scale audible to the human ear.

4. No more scrambling of programs from two or more stations.

5. A service range for FM transmitters that is substantially the same by day as by night - not true of any AM station.

6. Because of the wider frequency band available, more FM stations will be possible, even though each has a much wider individual channel than do AM stations.

7. Possibility of more localized radio broadcasting service, particularly desirable in small towns and cities with no stations at present.

8. Certainly the major network will take advantage of the growing popularity of FM to institute new and interesting programs.

Q. Since the FCC has assigned FM to the new band of 88 to 108 megacycles, replacing the old band of 42 to 50 megacycles, can present FM sets receive programs on both frequencies?

A. For receivers designed for the 42 to 50 megacycles frequencies only, some companies are preparing to introduce an inexpensive and easily installed converter, which will permit prewar receivers to operate in the new band.

Q. When will FM programs be available on the new band?

A. All present FM stations have been ordered by the FCC to start experimental operations in the new band on December 1 and to establish full program service by January 1.

A pick-and-shovel engineering job, begun in 1821 by the Pennsylvania State Works and involving excavation of 600,000,000 cubic feet of earth, produced 790 miles of canals and 117 miles of railroad line.

In restoring the section of St. Paul's Cathedral in London damaged by bombing, stone is being brought from the original quarries in Bathshire which were employed by the famous architect, Sir Christopher Wren, in building the cathedral in the 17th century, according to British Railways.

A bulldog got its name from the fact that it was used in England to fight bulls; but a pit bull was named because it fought other dogs in pits.

MORE ABOUT FM

More questions and answers about the great new development in radio, FM, are printed below. The questions and answers furnished by Radio Manufacturers' Association clarify new strikes in FM.

Q. Concerning the FM set in the home is it more complicated to operate than the present type of AM or standard broadcast radio receiver?

A. Operation of the FM set will be practically identical to the operation of the current or present AM sets. The improved tone control will, no doubt, be incorporated in all FM sets to bring out the
